ASSASSIN FIRES ON 2ND TEACHER

Today

Again, for the British Redskins and Spartans Where Ghosts Creep She Threw No Party

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

THE BRITISH yacht, Endeavour, wins again, this time by 51 seconds, and wins "all the way," covering each leg of the triangular race course ahead of the American boat, in spite of a considerable rip in the British jibsail.

Apparently after eighty years of vain efforts the British have built a better sailboat than the Americans could build. Perhaps the British are the better sailors. It matters little, now that we are losing, as it mattered little when we won.

Fast sailboats have become unimportant, like swift greyhounds or well-trained hawks to bring down game.

Mussolini begins military training for Italian boys at the age of eight years, the idea being to "give boys a passion for military life through frequent contact with armed forces."

The Red Indians went even further back. They developed a passion for war and scalps in the squaw even before the little fighting papoose was born, providing the females with interesting little stone hammers, used to crush in the skulls of surviving enemy warriors as the squaws went carefully over the battlefield at dusk.

Sparta trained her boys for killing, even encouraging them to murder, for practice, unarmed helots, as they went to their work before sunrise. But Sparta was unimportant compared to intelligent Athens, and a few white Puritans easily disposed of the Indians. Intelligence and justice wins wars.

In these days of airplanes and poison gas the warrior with a mere "passion for combat" will soon get more of it than he can digest.

There is a limit to man's "passion for war," none to his capacity for scientific killing. A Paris newspaper says Germans have invented a poison gas that retains its deadly killing power for eight days. An absorbent clay is impregnated with the gas dried, pulverized, sprayed from an airplane exhaust in a fine deadly powder.

Germany's general staff is said to be delighted with the invention.

Troops could not march over ground sprayed with this deadly dust, nor could massed populations escape from cities, if the dust were scattered over the suburbs.

War may eventually be destroyed by its own efficiency. If other nations lack that deadly poison gas dust, by the way, it is not that they are virtuous. They never happened to think of it.

Long ago, in Venice, was built a fine palace, the "Abbey of St. Gregory." The palace has changed hands and is now being "renovated," with plumbing, bathtubs, showers, electric bells, telephones, radio, that would considerably surprise any ancient abbot.

No "long beard" from across the mountains, no roving Hun from beyond the Volga, has appropriated the religious palace to other uses.

The new tenant is a very pretty, slender American girl named Barbara Hutton, who brings with her the proceeds of a five and ten cent store system that can quickly change any old abbey into a modern, fashionable "dilatory domicile." She brings also a husband, a "Georgian prince," named Mdivani, by-product of the five and ten cent stores, who will know how to make the old abbey "ring with merriment." Strange old ghosts will creep

Suspicious Blaze in Hitler's Paper

Berlin, Sept. 19 (AP)—A fire started today in the building of Chancellor Hitler's personal newspaper organ, the Voelkischer Beobachter, and an immediate inquiry was started to determine whether the blaze might have been of incendiary origin. Apprehension of incendiarism was felt because of the recent fire in quarters of the Russian trade delegation.

POLICE BATTLE MOB AT MAINE MILLS

ON NEW ENGLAND'S WAR FRONT

1—Maine rioting. Ten girls arrested at bayonet point by national guard troops in Lewiston. Wild outbreak in Waterville, mill stoned, troops called, four arrested, Gov. Brann refuses martial law.

2—Tense peace reported elsewhere on the New England strike front. Several mills in Rhode Island and Massachusetts reopen, under guns, including Saylesville, R. I., plant.

3—Massachusetts mill owners watch Governor Ely's reaction to petition for state guard over Monson plant.

4—Demobilization of state militia under way in Connecticut as threat of violence passes.

Two serious outbreaks in Maine today shattered the tense peace on the New England textile strike front.

Waterville was the scene of violent rioting, considerable property damage, some injuries. Police, using clubs and tear gas, clashed with rock-hurling mobs. Four men were arrested and the militia was called out.

National Guard troops already on guard in Lewiston seized 12 rioting pickets at bayonet point. Ten of these were girls.

Governor Louis J. Brann, declining to declare martial law for Waterville, said the state would assist local peace officers in protecting the rights of both strikers and those who prefer to remain at work. He said:

"The danger is from the irresponsible and from those outside coming into Maine."

Elsewhere in New England peace prevailed. Both mill owners and strike leaders claimed gains. Several mills in Massachusetts and Rhode Island either reopened or prepared to do so. Alleged intimidation, on the other hand, forced the closing of at least one mill that had remained open.

Independent surveys indicated 172,000 were idle in New England, 85,000 idle in Massachusetts on this third day of the third week of the national strike.

The Waterville outbreak, worst in Maine since the start of the

New York, Sept. 19—The terrible Morro Castle [illegible] might have been averted and precious lives might have been saved if three stewards had used their heads on the morning of September 8.

The witness, Doris Wo[illegible] Roselle Park, N. J., girl, told the investigating board she saw the fire in its earliest stage in the writing room on B deck and that three stewards were throwing buckets of water on the blaze.

DOORS LEFT OPEN

She stated positively they did not make any attempt to close the fire-screen door of the room which would have prevented the flames from spreading from the room. She also stated that the stewards told her not to call anybody, asserting confidently they could handle it.

"It was around 2:45 then," the girl related. "The flames were confined to the room. Then after a few minutes they suddenly burst out and began spreading rapidly."

"COUL DHAVE BEEN SHUT"

The girl's testimony was the first to show that anyone could get in or out of the writing room after discovery of the fire. Hoover was deeply impressed and when the

RABBI GIVES WARNING ON NEW PERIL

Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement, ends tonight, bringing to conclusion the Jewish season of holidays and days of worship that started with their celebration of New Year, September 9.

The troubles of the present and the customs of the ages were linked in a sermon given today by Rabbi Beryl D. Cohen of Temple Israel, Commonwealth avenue, during which he said:

"We are living at a time when individuals, cities, states and nations are desperately reaching out for new agencies to solve their problems. We are witnesses to colossal experimentation in the political, economic and social life of every nation.

"The old order, we are told, has collapsed. Out of the debris new forms of society are emerging. Individual man, from the humblest walks of life, to the highest in power, as well as nations, from the smallest to the greatest empires, are seeking peace, security, stability.

AGE OF FANATICS

"Determined 'iron men' are driving furiously the masses of many lands, brooking no deviation of thought, tolerating no murmur of opposition.

"The air is filled with the voices of fanatics—fanatics in politics, fanatics in economics, fanatics in social theory. The drama of our age is violent, embittered, and blindly zealous.

"Enraged humanity, like blind Samson, is tearing at the foundation of our social structure. We are in search of a more decent, more upright world; we are engaged in the eternal quest for peace, security, happiness.

"What is the central characteristic of this desperate quest if not externalism? Men and nations are clutching at external instrumentalities to solve their inner problems. That cannot be done.

"As long as these agencies, by which we seek deliverance, are only external, they are inadequate. The solution of our problems are bound up with humanity, personality and character."

Gloucester Girl Slashes Her Wrist

Salem, Sept. 19—Her wrist cut by a razor blade, Mis. Virginia Pommett, 20, of Chestnut street, Gloucester, was taken to Salem hospital today, when she was reported to be in serious condition.

Miss Pommett was taken to the hospital in a private automobile, and the hospital authorities notified the police.

Paroled Hub Man Caught in Holdup

Richard Williams, 27, a convict recently paroled from State Prison, is under arrest in New York city on robbery charges, according to word received today by the State board of parole.

Williams, who gave his address as Boston, and Roy Spain, 37, of Washington, were arrested after a chase following a holdup in a delicatesen store. The victim told police he was robbed of a diamond ring and $60. The loot was not recovered.

hearing adjourned at noon told International News Service:

"If it is true stewards could get into the writing room to throw buckets of water on the flames there—and I believe Miss Wackers testimony is competent—then they could have closed the fire-screen door, thus isolating the fire in that room.

"I want to give the stewards the benefit of the doubt, but it is becoming increasingly clear that if some attempt had been made to close those doors this disaster might have been prevented."

It is one of the first principles on shipboard to fight fire by smothering and isolating it. The elaborate fire-screen doors used for this fire-fighting purpose aboard the Morro Castle was the boast of the Ward Line. The doors, when closed, prevented fire from spreading from one part of a ship to another.

Yesterday Hoover discovered that not one single door had been closed on the Morro Castle when he inspected the charred hulk of the vessel where it is beached at Asbury Park, N. J.

TRIPP BARES ORDERS

Another important witness today was William W. Tripp of Dorchester, Mass., cadet engineer aboard the Morro Castle. Tripp, who was on the telegraph board in the engine room the morning of the tragedy, produced the only written record of the orders from the bridge during the frenzied 20 minutes after discovery of the fire.

The record was his "bell sheet." He read it, disclosing that Captain Warms had sent down nine different orders on speed and direction of the ship in the brief period.

Tripp first received an intimation of the fire at 2:55 a. m., he said. At that time he received a telephone call in the engine room asking if there was a fire there.

He said he answered no, then there came a series of telegraph bells which he noted on the "bell sheet." He said he was in charge of the starboard telegraphs at that time.

James Smith, a member of the board of trustees of [illegible] Edwin [illegible] dean of Wesleyan, R. I., is member student council president at Mt. Hermon school, tells police of undergraduates who were "fired" one night in revenge.

James Smith, a member of the board of trustees of [illegible] Edwin [illegible] dean of Wesleyan, R. I., is member student council president at Mt. Hermon school, tells police of undergraduates who were "fired" one night in revenge.

Then, he said, the following was recorded," reading from the sheet.

Tripp then began to read, after explaining he had been absent from the board from 3 a. m. to 3:10 to run an errand for the third engineer. He said:

"STAND BY" ORDER

"At 3 a. m., came the order, 'Stand by on both engines.' Then the orders came as follows:

"3:10 a. m.—'Full ahead, starboard.'

"3:[illegible] 'Slow speed ahead, starboard.'

"3:[illegible] 'Full—'

"3:[illegible] 'Stop on the port side.'

"3:[illegible] 'Full speed ahead on port side.'

"3:18 — '— astern — starboard side.'

"3:19 — '— ahead —.'

"3:19½ — '— port —.'

"3:20 — '—astern — starboard.'

"That was the last order I recorded."

"Did you repeat all these messages back to the bridge?" Smith asked.

"Yes, sir,' he said.

QUIT ROOM AT 3:35

Tripp said he left the engine room at about 3:35 a. m. "when the smoke rolled in thick like fog."

Tripp told how he and a small group of the "black gang" huddled under a ventilator and cursed the smoke.

Smith asked:

"Was there any criticism of the chief engineer for not coming down to his men?"

"No sir," Tripp said. "Nobody was criticized. The conversation didn't take that trend. We were all talking about the smoke."

The cadet engineer said they escaped through the shaft-alley when they could remain no longer.

He paid further tribute to Third Engineer Stamper, who, while his superior, Chief Engineer Eben S. Abbott, was many decks above escaping on No. 1 lifeboat, remained to the last in the engine room.

"Mr. Stamper was the last out by about four minutes," Tripp said.

"He made a final trip through the smoke-filled rooms to see that nobody was left behind."

Tripp said he and his group remained on the ship until rescue vessels arrived then jumped off. He said he and both deck stewards and his engine room associates aided in calming passengers.

"Being from the engine room, I didn't like the deck stewards," Tripp commented. "But I was amazed at the coura of some of them in this fire. We worked hand-in-hand."

"Were you ordered to leave the engine room?" Tripp was asked.

"Someone said, 'You'd better get out of here.'"

He said the engine room remained on deck until they were taken into lifeboats.

"We drifted around the ship," he testified, until we had picked up all passengers who had jumped."

AIDED PASSENGERS

Tripp said that members of the crew sought to dissuade passengers from jumping from the ship during the earlier stages of the fire.

"We did not want too many to jump off at a time. We were afraid they might hurt each other," he explained.

"The engine room crew, I think, acted splendidly," Tripp said, when asked for any comment.

"How many fire pumps were in operation during the fire?"

"All of them.

"Be more specific. How many?"

"The two main ones and all the others I can remember."

He said he did not know the normal pressure nor that prevailing at the fire, but declared the hose pressure was still good when he got on deck.

SATISFIES BOARD

Tripp, who is but 18 years old, obviously pleased the board with his quick, clear answers.

He will be a sophomore at Massachusetts Institute of Technology this fall.

Meanwhile Federal authorities investigated today a charge that members of the crew had been threatened with the blacklist if they tell the truth about the disaster.

The charge was given to United States Attorney Martin Conboy by William L. Standish, counsel for the Marine Workers International Union, who promised to produce sailors to testify to the threats.

Conboy, who has been conducting the grand jury investigation of the burning of the liner, said the charges would be given to his aids for investigation.

The inquiry was resumed today with testimony from Miss Wacker.

"I was a passenger on C deck," Miss Wacker began.

She said that she and a friend had decided to stay up all night.

SAW FIRE AT 2:40

"I had changed to street clothes and returned to the cabin of the girl who accompanied me. I remember it was later than 2:40 a. m. I left her cabin on B deck.

"As I stepped out of the door, facing forward, I saw the fire in the writing room. Stewards appeared to be throwing something on it to put it out.

Hoover asked Miss Wacker:

"Are you sure the fire doors were not closed?"

"Positive," she replied.

"There were no flames outside the room. The room itself seemed to us all afire on the inside, though I couldn't see much except smoke.

"Three stewards were throwing [illegible] something [illegible] smoke in the lounge adjoining," asked if she could do something. The stewards told her no, that they could handle it.

HEARD EXPLOSION

"The smoke got worse and I asked a steward if I couldn't call somebody or do something. He held up his hands, and said not to say anything to anybody that the fire was not bad.

"Shortly after that there was a sort of explosion and the flames burst out in the room," Miss Wacker's voice trailed off as she told of her escape from the boat. She lost her father that morning.

"I ran down and woke up my parents when I saw the fire spreading," she said, "they had been awakened by the smoke and we struggled with the lifebelts. We didn't know how to use them and put them on backwards.

STRUGGLE WITH BELTS

"We went up to B deck and saw people congregating there."

"Did you see any officers or stewards aiding them?" Hoover asked.

"No," the girl answered, "we didn't know what to do. I remember asking dad what about the lifeboats, and he said if we need them somebody surely would call us.

"At that time the left side of B deck was quite clear, but suddenly the flames shot along the full length of it driving us to the right side.

"I then heard the voice of Mr. Smith, the cruise director, trying to calm the passengers and urging them to go down to C deck, we went down there."

"We still were not greatly alarmed, but the smoke kept spreading. Finally there began to be cries of 'Jump,' and 'Overboard.' We couldn't tell who was giving the orders and didn't know what to do. We could hear many people jumping over.

"Then my mother cried 'Oh, my feet are burning,'—so then we jumped."

FATHER DIED IN HER ARMS

"We called to each other when we got in the water, my mother, my father and I—and swam away from the ship.

"We were in the water several hours before we were picked up by the Paramount fishing boat."

The girl made no reference to the fact her father was dead in her arms when the boat picked her up.

lead to the identity of the shotgun killer.

WIFE TO BE QUESTIONED

Deving into the private life and affairs of the slain school principal, Detective Dacey announced that every close associate of Dr. Speer including every one of his relatives would be questioned at length during the next two days.

Tomorrow, providing she returns here, Mrs. Speer, the widow, will be questioned at length. She has not yet been questioned by police.

Reviewing the results of the investigation so far, police noted that not one forward step had been taken since the probe started.

Up until yesterday, no stenographic records of questioning in the case had been made by the district attorney. The probe is a complete blank as far as determining who fired the murder-gun blast that killed Dr. Speer is concerned.

Aspects that make the Speer murder, most important in the western part of the state in quarter of a century, eligible as the "perfect crime" are:

PERFECT CRIME LOCALE

Time element. On Friday night, when Dr. Speer met death, darkness fell at 7:53; the shotgun blast came at 8:21; authorities were not notified until 8:54, 30 minutes after the murder.

The season. It was just before the opening of school. Practically all of the faculty were assembled in the administration building preparing the current curriculum. The weather was bad—the night gloomy.

SLAYER COOL GAMBLER

The terrain. The murderer had more than 1000 acres of thickly wooded land in which to hide. Roads were hardly used, yet furnished outlets to main routes. A thickly leafed tree screened the window through which the slayer fired. He could see in. Dr. Speer would not see out.

Motive. Dr. Speer was a man of regular habits, known, it appeared to the killer. Other members of the household had retired upstairs after the dinner hour.

The weapon. A common, yet death dealing shotgun of .12 gauge. Easy to get, hard to trace. It fired ammunition of the ball type that could not be traced like a bullet from a rifled weapon. It did not eject its used shells. It shot a spray of nine projectiles, guaranteeing deadliness within close range. It was easy to clean after use.

The murderer. Willing to gamble all on one blast of the gun. So sure of himself, his surroundings, the opportunity to get away that he did not hesitate, although a misfire or miscalculated aim might have been discovery.

FATHER ON JOB IN LIGHT ROW

By Associated Press

Camden, N. J., Sept. 19—A mother of six who sat with her legs dangling in a hole for 37 hours, yielded the seat to her husband early today, and he carried on the blockade to prevent erection of a pole by the electric company.

Mrs. Elsie Barnabis and her husband say it's their revenge for the time the Public Service Electric and Gas Company turned off the light when their little girl was sick.

Now, they note, it costs the company several dollars an hour to keep men there waiting for the vigil to weaken.

One complaint against the Barnabies came from a neighbor, Denny Di Reizo, who said the life of his brother, Joseph, 23, a paralytic invalid, is being endangered.

Denny claims Joseph cannot eat except when his muscles are relaxed and that since the excitement began he is starving slowly. Denny threatens an injunction against the Barnabies.

But the young-looking Mrs. Barnabis nonchalantly sat with her legs dangling in the hole all Monday night, all day yesterday, and through last night until her husband relieved her. She was warmed by a fire built by sympathetic neighbors and nourished by soup and food cooked by her 14-year-old daughter, Dina.

Mrs. Barnabis feels she has a cause. She said:

"My little girl was sick when I begged them not to turn the light off, and they told me to pay. I'm telling them to pay now."

ASTORS DUE TO 'KISS-AND-MAKE-UP' AT HARJES WEDDING

FRIENDS READY TO OBSERVE 'SPOONING'

New York, Sept. 19—When you're young and newly married and the spirit of love and kisses is in the air, it's pretty hard to stay cross.

And that's why Society with a big "S," is betting 65-cent dollars to sugar doughnuts that John Jacob Astor, III, and his three months' bride, the former Ellen "Tucky" French of Newport, will no longer have a "mad on" when they meet today at the big church wedding of their mutual friends, Miss Joan Blake and Henry Harjes.

Of course, as all Park avenue knows, the "Jacky" Astors have been just hatefully polite to each other since that perfectly awful tiff they had in front of a Providence hotel.

JACK ALONE

"Tucky" Astor dashed home by fast train to mamma, leaving husband Jack with nobody to be mean to but mere newspapermen. Then when Jack came to New York, he took a hotel suite—and took it alone.

Now to the rescue, happily, come Miss Blake and her international-banking-firm-scion fiance, young Henry Harjes. They are middle-aisle-ing today in the ultra-fashionable Church of the eHavenly Rest.

"Tucky" Astor is a bridesmaid. "Jacky" Astor is a guest by special invitation of his chum, the bridegroom. It's just one of those things that can't be dodged.

Jack and "Tucky" don't want to dodge it, anyhow. That's the tip that's going society's rounds.

HAND-HOLDING SCENE

The real inside dope on the kiss-and-make-up sweepstakes is that "arguing Astors" will be holding hands, behind a potted palm somewhere, before the last strains of the "Voice That Breathed O'er Eden" have done echoing among church rafters.

Jack and "Tucky," interviewed separately today, couldn't seem to recall that they'd had a spat.

"What fight?" young Mrs. Astor asked her interrogators. But she asked it smiling.

"Nuts," said John Jacob Astor, III. And he didn't smile.

BABY IS FOUND IN SWAMP

Richmond, R. I., Sept. 19—Golden-haired Nancy Marshall, two-year-old home girl, today was back with brothers and sisters, all 10 of them, were keeping close watch upon her lest her baby feet stray away again.

Nancy's disappearance in swamplands near her home called out one of the largest searching parties on record in the state, before the little tousle-head was found by the light of a CCC man's flashlight in the dusk. Her disappearance was reported Monday by her mother, Mrs. Rose Marshall.

Nancy apparently suffered no serious effects from her 30 hours in the swamp, despite the cold and wet weather she experienced. After a warm bath and a night's rest, she seemed well recovered from her fatigue and the slight cold she had caught.

PoliceRadio Chases Steer

Police radio was utilized today for the first time in chasing wild steers that break away from the Brighton abattoir to rush through Brighton streets endangering residents and wrecking property.

Three minutes after a police broadcast today, a wild steer was slain in Wexford street, near Market street.

Officers John G. McLean and Thomas L. Hyde, of the Metropolitan District Commission police, killed the steer with one shot from the cruising car gun.

7 Minutes' Delay for Subway Train

Passengers on a Boston-bound Cambridge tunnel train were delayed several minutes today when trouble developed in the automatic airbrakes, causing the train to come to three stops, one before entering Charles street station, again before entering Park street, and again between Park and Washington street. In all the delay was seven minutes.

The bride was gowned in a beautiful Vionnet model of old ivory satin, with long sleeves and buttons in the waist in back, cut en train. Her veil of tulle was held by a half coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley.

GERMANY TRIES SPARTAN ROLE

By Associated Press

Berlin, Sept. 19—Spartan hardness and discipline is Germany's slogan, Konstantin von Neurath, minister of foreign affairs, told the international road congress at its closing session today. This slogan, he said, applies to Germany during the period of setting her house in order.

The foreign minister declared the domestic markets were sound and that Germany should succeed abroad, saying:

"We are convinced we shall overcome the difficulties in the foreign markets as well."

He said he expected to solve problems with the understanding and co-operation of foreign nations, but that if sufficient support was not found Germany would master the difficulties at the cost of reduced imports.

BANCROFT'S 'EX' SEEKS CASH

By Universal Service

Los Angeles, Sept. 19—George Bancroft, film heavy, is to appear in superior court today to defend himself in what is tantamount to a reopening of the separate maintenance action against him brought by his former wife, Edna G. Bancroft.

Bancroft on September 7 was ordered to pay his first wife and her attorneys a total of $4000 within 10 days, but on September 10, Bancroft's attorneys filed notice of appeal from the judgment.

Attorneys filed an affidavit for the first Mrs. Bancroft in which it was declared that, as a result of the appeal, it would possibly be two years before final judgment could be obtained.

In addition, Bancroft's first wife asks the court to award her $1000 a month alimony, pending final adjudication of the case, an additional $2500 in attorney's fees, $200 for costs, and that the actor be required to post a bond to insure payment of the $4000 he was ordered to pay.

Red Cross Plan Big 'Disaster'

A Red Cross public disaster relief drill will be held in Boston on or about October 20 Joseph R. Harrlen, chairman of the Boston Red Cross Chapter announced today. Tent headquarters will be set up on the Common where imaginary medical aid, food and shelter will be provided for the "victims" of the assumed disaster.

Working with Hamlen on the plans are Mayor Mansfield, honorary chairman; James Jackson, relief committee chairman; Roy M. Cushman, vice-chairman; Dr. Arthur B. Emmons 2d, executive director of the Boston Chapter, and Richard K. Conant, State commissioner of public welfare.

Mulloney Aide Tells of Huge Loan

note and a second mortgage on the Colonial Theater, Haverhill, alleged by the government to have been assigned to her the day after its purchase by Deery.

Morrissey told his story under the examination of Irving G. McCann, special assistant attorney general.

Q—When did you first hear anything with reference to the $131,000? A—I first heard about it on or about Sept. 29, 1931.

Q—From whom? A—Mr. Mulloney.

Q. Where were you when you heard this?. A. I was in his office. He said, "We are going to put through this real estate loan on the Colonial Theater for Mr. Deery and Mr. Deery is going to donate money to the Salem Trust Company." I can't remember the exact words but I understood Deery was to give or put, in substance, money into the Salem Trust Company. Deery did not have to do this for I knew the Salem Trust Company accounts with the Federal National were overdrawn.

Q. K'D BY MULLONEY

Q—How did you happen to have this talk with Mr. Mulloney? A—I was in and out of the Mulloney office all day. Mr. Mulloney just told me he was going to do this. The only reference I had before this was I told Mr. Mulloney that Mr. Donovan (treasurer of the Salem Trust) was going to sell the property to Mr. Deery and told him that Mr. Donovan mentioned this when he asked me what the Federal National Company was.

Q—What was said? A—Mr. Mulloney said it would probably be a pretty good thing if Mr. Deery could get the Colonial Theater property and that he thought it would be a pretty good thing if he could get the loan. I know we gave the $131,000 note to the loan department, but where we got the note from I can't remember.

Morrissey reiterated that he was given to understand the Salem affiliate needed money and that the $131,000 was to go to the treasury of the Salem bank. Morrissey in his capacity as a Federal National vice-president was a director of the Salem bank.

His testimony followed conclusion of the story of Miss Ganley, who resumed the witness stand this morning under questioning of Marvin C. Taylor, defense counsel, in the crowded courtroom at trial of her uncle, charged with using a "straw," and of Mulloney, who is charged with misapplication of the $131,000.

TELLS OF MORTGAGE

Taylor questioned the girl at length today regarding the second mortgage on the Colonial Theater.

Yesterday the girl testified that the money received from the Boston bank was subject to Deery's instructions although deposited in her name at the Salem Trust.

"I realized that I was legally bound under the second mortgage," Miss Ganley stated this morning.

The guarantee under which the Salem Realty Company promised to pay $625 a month on the note was for her protection, she said.

She explained: "That was a part of the agreement. I got the guarantee from the Salem Realty Company and not from Mr. Deery."

RUSSIA SEIZES MANCHU AREA

By International News Service

The Soviet troops began erecting extensive fortifications to hold the seized land, it was stated.

NEW YORK CITY FATHERS PUSH LOTTERY PLAN

By DOROTHY ROE
Universal Service Staff Correspondent

New York, Sept. 19 — Father Knickerbocker discarded his powdered wig and knee breeches for a rakish cap and checkered suit, as he became official sponsor of a lottery for the purpose of feeding his needy children.

New York's municipal lottery plan, together with two new tax measures to provide relief for the city's destitute, has been passed by both the board of aldermen and the board of estimate, and today the city fathers were hard at work on the details of a plan to pour millions into city coffers and make a few small fortunes for the lucky.

PUBLIC VIEW LENIENT

Despite wide criticism of the lottery plan, the prevailing attitude of the man in the street was:

"We can't let people starve. What's wrong with a lottery?"

Postoffice authorities in Washington sternly announced that even though the proposed New York lottery is to be instituted for relief purposes, use of the mails will be barred to it under any guise.

The lottery plan, sponsored by Bronx Borough President Lyons, provides for a membership association, with dues of $2.50 for each member.

Memberships are to be sold throughout the nation, and each six months the association will choose officers by lot, the lucky "officer" to receive substantial "salaries," which, when examined carefully, will turn out to be lottery prizes.

TO START AT ONCE

Aldermanic President Deutsch bitterly opposed the lottery proposal, saying:

"To approve this plan will mean that the greatest city in the world will have to resort to gambling to help the unemployed. I vote no."

But, sponsors of the measure pointed out the panic among the thousands of unemployed when all city relief was suspended Saturday, and noted the fact that passage of the program resulted immediately in payment of $582,000 in relief checks to 100,000 destitute persons, by order of Welfare Commissioner Hodson.

The lottery plan, which it has been estimated will bring in a revenue of at least $12,000,000 yearly, may become operative at once, unless blocked by court order.

"SILENT" THIEF RAIDS HOME

Invasion of the home of Mrs. Bertha Murphy, Hawthorne street, Weymouth, by a "phantom" burglar was revealed today to Weymouth police.

So quietly did the burglar go about his work in ransacking every bureau in the house that the two Murphy children and the pet dog were not awakened. A neighbor's daughter, in whose care the children had been left, was unaware that the burglar was in the house, she told police.

Mrs. Murphy discovered a bureau drawer upset and a pocketbook missing when she returned from the movies. The pocketbook contained only receipted bills, she told police.

PLANES LEAD SEARCH FOR KAMINSKI

Willimantic, Ct., Sept. 19—In Alexander Kaminski, 24-year-old killer who fled Springfield, Mass., jail as he waited in the shadow of the electric chair, authorities today feared they had a reincarnation of notorious John Dillinger.

Closely paralleling the sensational career of the Indiana bandit, who met death at the hands of federal agents a few weeks ago, Kaminski was able to slip through cordon after cordon of police.

Airplanes, high-powered police cars, machine-gunning state troopers reinforced by Massachusetts state police, all tried to run Kaminski down. But he still eluded his trackers.

One clue to the killer's whereabouts came when an automobile stolen in Thompsonville was found in Coventry. In it was a cap that police believed Kaminski wore. The car was found but a few miles from the slayer's former home in Mansfield.

Also in the car were burglar's tools. A schoolhouse nearby had been entered.

Stanley Burdick 26, a paroled state prison convict, was arrested early today at Meriden.

TWO SAVED IN PLANE CRASH

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 19—Circling the St. Paul airport helplessly for an hour and 40 minutes, a passenger ship carrying five passengers and two pilots landed safely here without use of its wheels.

Mel Freeburg, pilot, and his co-pilot, John Woodhead, noticed the retractable wheels were stuck and would not open for a landing. Freeburg emptied the gasoline tanks, and brought the ship to a virtual three point landing, skidding along the turf. Damage was slight.

Workers, Payrolls Show August Gain

Washington, Sept. 19 (AP)—Factory payrolls and employment increased during August by 3¼ per cent, respectively, over July, Secretary of Labor Perkins said today. Approximately 73,000 more employes were at work and $1,000,000 more wages was disbursed.

However, declines in certain mine manufacturing industries brought the employe increase down to a net gain of only 15,000.

LEAGUE TAKES UP CHACO WAR

By Associated Press

Geneva, Sept. 19—With Russia occupying her permanent seat in the League of Nations council for the first time, French and British delegates today denounced the bloody war between Paraguay and Bolivia as a debacle that must stop.

The speakers were Louis Barthou, French foreign minister, and Captain Anthony Eden, British lord privy seal, who said the war had lasted too long and the league must act.

A protest against Russia's admission to the league was read to the assembly from exiles, who said they represented a group of former independent nations now federated as republics with the Soviet union.

POLICE OUSTER MEETS FIGHT

After testimony by scores of Cambridge officials and residents that Captain Joseph J. Donahue, veteran head of the Cambridge traffic squad, appeared able to go about his police duties, Chief John J. McBride had Captain Donahue's retirement under advisement today.

The veteran captain, retired by order of Mayor Richard M. Russell as part of the mayor's campaign to remove 15 members from the police force for alleged physical ailments, was given a hearing before Chief McBride. More than 100 persons appeared in behalf of Donahue.

Dr. Maurice L. Dressler, city physician who signed the certificate of ill-health which led to Captain Donahue's retirement after an examination at the Boston dispensary, admitted he believed the captain was capable of performing his duties in the traffic bureau. He insisted, however, that Donahue was unable to perform general police duty.

A young lady, christened "Greta Gustafson," known to many by her invented name of Greta Garbo, celebrated her 28th birthday yesterday. As a young girl she worked in a store in Stockholm, Sweden, and here she has made and earned ten thousand dollars a week. Her birthday is mentioned because this queer young lady did not "throw" any great party on the edge of any costly California swimming pool. "Just a quiet evening at home," said she, and stayed at home to think of swiftly passing time. That helps to explain her success. En bildet ein talent, sich in der stille.

New German regulations forbid Jewish young men "dressing in uniforms, marching in columns, conducting field drills or carrying banners." Such semi-military demonstrations have "caused considerable disquietude." That seems like unnecessary disquietude, considering that Jews in Germany number only 600,000, against 60,000,000 non-Jews, or 1 in 100.

Perhaps German military authorities have read the ancient Jewish legend about Joseph, of the coat of many colors, who, with an army of 800, defeated another army of hundreds of thousands, the latter not approved by Jehovah.

Business is business. The good people of Switzerland hate Communism, for they own hotels, farms, cows, goats, mountains, and do not want to divide them up. Russia is now in the League of Nations and Russians are coming to Geneva to spend good Swiss francs, and Geneva shop windows welcome the Russians with red placards that read, "Welcome to the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, which bring us peace."

Energetic Lord Beaverbrook of the London Express, asked whether England would trade with Russia, said, "Of course, we trade with cannibals if they have anything we want."

Business generally has the same thought.

Finance Minister Gomez, of Mexico, is coming to see about paying Mexico's foreign debt of $267,438,000, in default since 1927. If this country would increase the price and the demand for silver sufficiently, Mexico could pay with ease. As it is, creditors will be asked to make some "ability to pay" compromise.

CAMPAIGN ENDS IN WHIRLWIND TONIGHT

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Whirlwind rallies in every section of the state, red fire and a veritable bombardment of oratory tonight brings to a close the hotly contested primary battles.

Tomorrow, voters of the Democratic and Republican parties will nominate their candidates for United States senator, governor, lieutenant-governor and other state officers, for the state senate and house, governor's council, congressmen, district attorneys, sheriff of Middlesex County, and various other county officials.

Former Mayor James M. Curley, whose spectacular campaign for the Democratic nomination for governor against General Charles H. Cole has attracted nation-wide interest, will reach the climax of his efforts tonight in Symphony Hall. One of the greatest gatherings in the political history of the city is assured.

END OF PRE-PRIMARY

Standing on a platform of work and wages, the former mayor, original Roosevelt man and ardent advocate of the New Deal, has aroused the democrats to a high pitch of enthusiasm. That he will sweep to victory in tomorrow's voting is indicated in unbiased reports from practically every city in the state.

Curley's nomination will mean the end of the experimental pre-primary convention, which has cost the taxpayers of the state many thousands of dollars and has kept the two major political parties in a turmoil since last April. He has pledged himself to work for the repeal of the law.

Because of the criticisms of the New Deal by Governor Ely, General Cole's chief supporter, a victory by the former mayor will be interpreted throughout the country as a complete endorsement of the Roosevelt administration.

CURLEY ATTACKED

The Cole campaign was virtually brought to a close in Tremont Temple last night, and as far as enthusiasm went, was a disappointment to the Cole camp. While the audience of 2500 rose at times to bursts of applause, the cheer leaders at times were forced to great effort to stir the crowd.

Dr. Helen I. Doherty-McGillicuddy of Boston, presided at this rally, which saw savage attacks made upon Curley by Senator Walsh and Governor Ely.

RECORD VOTE SEEN

Because of the bitterness of the Democratic governorship contest, a record primary vote is looked for tomorrow. Two years ago the total state Democratic primary vote was 309,252—118,410 being cast in Boston. Boston's Democratic vote this year is expected to be nearer the 150,000 mark.

In surprise movement, the Hendricks Club, over which the late Martin Lomasney presided for many years, has endorsed the candidacy of former Senator Joseph J. Mulhern for district attorney over the present incumbent, District Attorney William J. Foley.

Curley Victory Spirit Stirs Huge Throng to Cheer for Their Idol

Here is a graphic glimpse of just one little current in the Curley-for-Governor tide of enthusiasm sweeping Massachusetts, bearing upon its crest the will of the people for able leadership these next two years. This crowd is part of the thousands who thronged Pemberton square in Boston to hear and cheer the candidate for the Democratic nomination. Many were so far from the speaking platform they could not glimpse the former mayor, but stayed to applaud his voice. Similar scenes have been enacted in every county of the Commonwealth in the surge of public sentiment behind the Curley drive. This enthusiasm is a reflection of well merited public confidence that will find a more lasting expression at the polls tomorrow. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

Home Work May Restore Millions to Payrolls

By PEGGY DOYLE

(This is the eighth of a series of articles explaining the new National Housing Act which, under facilities being developed by the Federal Housing Administration, enables home-owners in Boston and other communities to obtain inexpensive, easy-to-repay loans for repairing or improving their homes.)

Approximately 60 per cent of the buildings in this country are in need of reconditioning, according to a survey sponsored by the Federal Housing Administration.

If you and the rest of the owners of these properties were to initiate this reconditioning AT ONCE, approximately 4,000,000 men and women, formerly employed either in the construction industry or in allied industries, would be returned to a payroll.

Slowly property-owners are discovering the ease with which they may obtain one of these new Modernization Credit Plan loans—and bankers are beginning to appreciate the vast potentialities opened by this increasing stream of dollars into an erstwhile stagnant industry.

LOANS $100 TO $2000

Some of these loans are for as little as $100 and none for more than $2000, but thousands of them from hundreds of cities throughout the United States will put into circulation millions of idle dollars.

Letters continue to flow to the Housing Editor's desk — letters from owners of real estate who would renovate their holdings, some in a serious state of disrepair following the ravages of four or five years of depreciation.

Following are some of these inquiries:

Dear Miss Doyle:

I have a piece of property. I would like to recondition in the way of installing a new heating plant and building a new chimney. What steps do I take to secure a $500 loan for this purpose? I would also like to use it to pay up my last year's taxes.

My mortgage credit is good. My husband, who makes good wages, has been employed by the New Haven Railroad for the past 21 years. MRS. K.

My Dear Mrs. K.:

The amount of the loan is governed by annual income and the value of the property. If your husband's annual income is at least five times the amount of the annual payments on the proposed loan, he is eligible to get one of these government-sponsored loans.

Go to the bank holding your mortgage. If they are not cooperating with the Federal Housing Administration, go to a financial institution (national, savings, state bank or trust company, industrial bank, building and loan association, or finance company) that is. They will give you a credit statement to fill out and, if approved, you will be asked to sign promissory note for the amount of the loan. I am certain you will secure the proposed loan without any difficulty.

Housing Editor.

Attention of Housing Editor:

Does the Modernization Credit Plan take landscaping in its scope?

G. H. D., Cambridge.

My Dear G. H. D.:

Yes. Any repair, improvement or addition on your real estate is possible under this government sponsored loan plan.

Housing Editor.

My Dear Housing Editor:

Can a church obtain a Federal Housing Administration loan for alterations or repairs?

Rev. J. L. D., Dorchester.

My Dear Rev. J. L. D.:

Yes, at the discretion of the bank or other lending institutions to which the official board of the church may apply. The FHA has ruled that Contract of Insurance for Modernization Loans, which is signed by all approved lending institutions, clearly covers repairs, alterations and improvements on churches. And the term "improvement" includes anything which is built in, becoming a permanent part of the structure, such as heating plants or pipe organs.

Housing Editor.

LANDSLIDE FOR CURLEY IS PREDICTED

dacy of General Charles H. Cole before midnight tonight. He said:

"Senator Walsh now knows that my victory is mine. He knows that my enemies are in flight. Long before the polls open tomorrow, his principal supporters will come to me like so many frightened children seeking the protection of a kind and indulgent father.

"Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield and the Ely-appointed chairman of the Boston Finance Commission, Joseph J. Leonard, will hide behind closed doors while awaiting the final tabulation of the votes cast. Then Leonard will prepare to abandon his office on January 1 and Mansfield will prepare for the day of reckoning with a governor who believes that the city worker is worthy of his hire—a governor who will permit no further wage cuts for those on the municipal payroll."

Inspired by the tremendous receptions accorded him in every section of the city last night the former mayor began the final day of his campaign with visits to the 22 wards of Boston.

Tonight he will make brief addresses to audiences in all parts of Greater Boston. Among the places which he will visit are Union square, Somerville; Central square, Cambridge, Warren Hall Brighton; Brookline high school, Mary E. Curley school, Jamaica Plain; Memorial high school, Roxbury, and the Vine street municipal building, Roxbury.

His principal address of the evening will be delivered at Symphony Hall, where he expects to speak for an hour.

Former Fire Commissioner Theodore A. Glynn, completing a canvass of the entire Roxbury section today, announced that indications are that the Curley forces will carry each precinct of the district by an average vote of 15 to 1.

"Roxbury citizens are aroused by Governor Ely's description of our district as a slum and by his decision to send state police into ward 9 tomorrow. Those are the two biggest blunders of a campaign that has been distinguished principally by the stupid, blundering fashion in which it was managed."

Former City Councillor Francis E. Kelly of Ward 15, Dorchester, who is a candidate for lieutenant governor, abandoned his own campaign for a brief period today to send 1000 letters to voters of his district urging that they support former Mayor Curley tomorrow. His communication read in part:

"I attended the Democratic state convention at Worcester in June and after witnessing the unfair treatment accorded former Mayor Curley by the so-called party bosses I decided that I would support him."

City Councillor Thomas H. Green of Charlestown announced today that Democratic voters of his ward have offered him the use of 225 automobiles for transportation of citizens to the polls to vote for former Mayor Curley tomorrow.

Addressing Boston and East Cambridge audiences, having a total estimated attendance of 23,000 last night, former Mayor Curley said that his opponents in the present campaign have attempted by every artifice at their command to blacken his character and relegate him to the political graveyard. Continuing, he said:

"I have given the people of my city, state and nation, 35 years of almost uninterrupted service."

Dorchester Man Held for Larceny

Joseph A. Hume, 45, of Nevada street, Dorchester, was arrested by Lynn police inspectors today on an indictment warrant charging larceny and forgery in the amount of $6000 from a plumbing company in Lynn.

According to police the shortage was discovered when employes of the company reported that they had not received benefit bonus checks due them. Until two months ago, Hume was employed by the company.

Store Man Taken on Ride, Robbed

Forest Dale, Vt., Sept. 19—Police here were searching for two young men who took Elmer Partlow, 55, Forest Dale storekeeper, for a ride, beat him and stole his watch and diamond ring.

They then drove back to the store for his cash, but when he dodged behind a counter and called police they escaped. Police said the auto bore stolen plates.

WHAT can a woman do to be charming?

It isn't a matter of a Grecian profile or gowns with a Paris label. It isn't a matter of age or money. It is often a matter of health.

Health means a clear skin . . . sparkling eyes . . . bubbling vitality . . . steady nerves and a dependable disposition. Radiant health is the foundation of beauty and charm. The woman who is healthy and friendly and interested in the world about her cannot fail to be attractive to others.

If you are not as well as you want to be, try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Remember that 98 out of 100 women say, "It helps me!"

"I was a disagreeable old spit-cat!" —says Mrs. Davidson

"I was so nervous I wanted to scream. Your Tablets helped me wonderfully. My husband remarked last night of the difference he sees in me. I am not that grouchy, disagreeable old spit-cat I was three weeks ago. I am a cheerful, joking young gal again."—Mrs. Clarence R. Davidson, 1311 Millburn Blvd., Mishawaka, Indiana.

"All the fun was gone out of life—"

"All the fun was gone out of life. I was very nervous and had terrible backaches. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a great medicine for a woman at any time of life but especially at the Change and before motherhood. My daughter Lucille feels 100% better since she took it. It helped my daughter-in-law, too."—Mrs. S. Matushek, 10007 Edbrooke Ave., Chicago, Illinois.

If periodic pain is dragging you down, ask your druggist for Lydia E. Pinkham's Tablets. Mrs. Marion Sidor, 5436 Grace Street, Chicago, Illinois, says: "I had severe pains and terrible headaches periodically. My husband saw your Tablets advertised and bought me a bottle. They helped me wonderfully — stopped all the pain."

It's old fashioned to suffer. Silly, too, when so many stores sell Lydia E. Pinkham's Tablets. They bring welcome relief from cramping pains, "blue" spells, periodic backache and headache and similar discomforts which undermine a woman's charm.

DEMOCRATS OF SUFFOLK COUNTY

Before you go to the Ballot Box Tomorrow let me call these excerpts from Editorials of a great Boston newspaper to your attention. When these were written the present District Attorney had been in office for seven years:

The Boston Post, Monday, Oct. 23, 1933

APPALLING

In these days when gangsters jeer at law, when they calmly proceed to rob and murder in the full confidence they are immune, when they admittedly are able to bribe or intimidate those who stand in the way of their freedom, many shocking things have happened.

But the release on straw bail of one of the most desperate of bandits, who is sought for a murder committed on the heels of his mysterious exit from jail, is the climax of all the long, rotten record here.

Think of it!

The District Attorney's office evidently paid no attention to this bandit or concerned itself with his release on bail.

The District Attorney's office knew this man was a fugitive from justice in New Jersey, knew that he was under indictment in Cambridge.

Now the police are seeking this gangster, charging him with the atrocious murder of an aged manufacturer.

Is this strange sequence of events just stupidity or something worse?

Whether it is stupidity or something more sinister, it is appalling.

If the people of Boston want to know why gangsters, bandits and murderers escape justice in this city, they can read the answer in this ghastly episode.

What do they propose to do about it?

The Boston Post, Friday, Nov. 3, 1933

A NEW DEAL

There will be no clean-up and no revelations unless an aroused public sentiment can blow away the smoke screen which surrounds this disgraceful affair.

A new deal is sadly needed in Boston.

There can be no new deal unless the public, which ought to be sick to death of crooked bankers, gangsters and jury fixers, demands one.

A new deal means a clean-up. It means an end of crooked bankers, crooked politicians and the whole tribe of grafters and gangsters. Some of the old spirit of stalwart resistance to wrong is necessary.

Surely, we are not ready to surrender to the forces of evil.

The Boston Post, Tuesday, Nov. 7, 1933

VOTE!

A gangster arrested 12 times by the police for all sorts of crimes, and yet who escaped punishment year after year, was shot down in a crowded restaurant by another gang leader.

The man sought by the police for the shooting has a record of more than 30 arrests, and is now on parole from State Prison for a jewelry robbery and holdup.

This may serve as another illuminating example to the public of just why Boston is a gangster ridden city.

These gangsters are free to rob and murder because they feel they are immune from the law.

This is the situation which stares Boston voters in the face as they go to the polls to vote today.

If such shocking banditry were merely one sensational incident in the life of the city we might well rely on the authorities to clean it up speedily. But it is just one more scandal to add to the long and crushing list. It comes on top of at least a dozen gangster murders, hundreds of bold holdups, of desperate bandits released on straw bail and of shameful and open jury bribing.

Only an aroused city can put an end to these rotten scandals.

WINANT BOARD REPORTS TO ROOSEVELT

By Associated Press

Washington, Sept. 19—A report by the Presidential Mediation Board was awaited today as an event of major importance in the giant textile strike.

The board, headed by Governor Winant of New Hampshire, has been unsuccessful in its attempt to obtain arbitration. It is expected to submit a report today or tomorrow to Secretary of Labor Perkins to be turned over to President Roosevelt.

Both sides awaited anxiously to see whether the board would suggest any means of settling the strike.

A call to 100,000 more workers to leave mills appears certain on or before Monday.

Empowered by union leaders to call out allied groups at its discretion, the national strike committee set the deadline for the summons to the rayon, carpet, rug and dyeing workers as Monday.

As "the strike continued to paralyze much of the cloth-making of the nation, the walkout was attacked and defended. Henry I. Harriman, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, denounced it as a "public affliction" as "vicious and unwarranted."

In another speech over the air, Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, declared: "Strike lines are holding despite tremendous pressure by employers and by state governments in many places." He criticized the use of the National Guard in strike areas.

CONTEST BABIES GET CALL

With entries in the American Legion baby contest coming in faster every day, officials in charge of the contest emphasize again today that only Massachusetts babies are eligible. The baby's father or guardian, however, need not be a member of the Legion or an ex-soldier, sailor or marine.

Many of the entries have been received from Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island and Connecticut, but, under the rules of the contest, all must be rejected and the photographs sent back.

The contest, sponsored by James E. Welsh Post, No. 88 of the Legion, is rousing wide response among parents throughout the state.

Any child of a Massachusetts voter or any child with a legal and registered voter as guardian is eligible in the competition.

Entries must be made by means of the baby's photographs, regular cabinet size. Photographs will be reproduced in the Boston Evening American—pictures selected at random—and any day the picture of your child entry may appear. Watch for them each day.

Staff members of various Boston hospitals will be judges of health in this contest. Personality of the entrants will be judged by associates of the Fox Film Corporation and members of the staff of the Boston Evening American.

10 False Alarms Cost City $1000

Because 10 false alarms were rung in Greater Boston, the Fire Department is $1000 poorer today.

The alarms all came within a period of five hours at an estimated cost to the department of $100 for each false alarm.

Strike Idleness of Dad Affects Family of Fifteen

When George Frigette of Cabot street, Lowell, doesn't draw his pay envelope there are 15 in his household who are affected. The textile strike walkout which has left the father, temporarily at least, without employment is very much a matter of daily concern to himself, his wife, and 13 children. Here is the Frigette family. Left to right, rear: Joseph, Laura, Leo, Doris, Anita, Cecile, Juliette. Front: Anslime, Ritia, Mrs. George Frigette, Lorraine, Mr. Frigette, Ramond, Jeannette, Armand. MAINE POLICE FIGHT RIOTERS; TROOPS CALLED OUT strikes, occurred outside the Lockwood Manufacturing plant, employing 600 operatives, about 200 of whom are on strike.

GIRLS LEAD BATTLE

Two girl pickets carrying union banners led a surge toward the mill gates and police moved in to battle a crowd of 200. Stones shattered scores of windows in the mill.

Police used clubs freely after the wind ruined the effects of tear gas. A hand-to-hand battle lasted for several minutes.

The rioters retreated but the situation was no menacing Acting Mayor Robert Jackson ordered the militia mobilization signal sounded on the fire whistle, and a company was quickly on hand to aid police.

Strikers attempted unsuccessfully to take the four men arrested away from the police.

BAYONETS HALT GIRLS

The Lewiston outbreak, featured by the activities of the girl pickets, centered about the Lewiston Bleachery Company buildings under picketing by 200 strikers.

The 10 girls arrested broke from the picket line permitted by the troops and ran to the mill gate to heckle four girl workers approaching the plant. At points of their fixed bayonets, troopers lined the girls up against the mill wall and held them until police arrived. No further picketing was allowed.

The outbreak was the first in Lewiston where 10,000 are at work in the mills.

The peaceful reopening of the Sayles Finishing plant at Saylesville was considered a good omen in Rhode Island, scene of two riot deaths last week when Governor Green threatened to call federal troops.

Approximately 400 workers returned to the looms, being permitted to pass through the guard lines established about the plant by the state militia.

After the mill wheels again were turning, guards-men permitted 125 pickets to establish a line when a pledge of peace had been given by Joseph Sylvia. Guns were mounted on the roof of the plant and gas bombs were stacked nearby.

The Strong, Hewat Company mill at North Adams, reopened after having remained closed since Sept. 10, when the weavers refused to work. Although the plant employs about 250, only 75 were called in today to rebuild operations gradually.

TROUBLE BREWS IN SALEM

In the interval since the closing of the mill the weavers reversed their strike decision and notified H. J. Hewat, president of the firm, that they were ready to return to their looms.

Meanwhile, union officials from Adams gave assurance that no further picketing would be carried on at the mill, both workers and union leaders acknowledging that the working conditions and wages paid were among the best in New England.

The Pequot Mills in Salem were the scene of the only excitement in Massachusetts when a shift was leaving just before midnight. A crowd of 2000 was gathered outside the mill gates.

Vagilus Houtos, 34, a picket was charged by police with having waved to the crowd, shouting:

"Let's get 'em!"

Unfortunately, right beside Houtos was City Marshal John C. Harkins. Houtos went into the patrol wagon in a hurry and if a riot were in the making it stopped right there.

Lowell police were still concentrating against Communists, and two girls and six men had been ordered to leave town today, not to return.

ELY SAYS 'NO TROOPS'

One of them was Carl Reeve who had waited on Governor Ely with the committee for the Defense of Political Prisoners. The Governor had refused to talk to him.

Strike leaders in Massachusetts were somewhat worried about the loophole that Governor Ely left in his assurance that he did not want to call out the troops to guard those desiring to go back to work. He said:

"In no instance will the army or militia be sent out unless I am fully convinced that it is the wish of a substantial majority of the workers to return to their work."

The governor had on his desk a petition from mill workers in Monson that evinced just that sort of a wish. This petition, calling for protection against flying squadrons of strikers from outside cities and towns, was purportedly signed by a substantial part of the Ellis mill employes.

Companies in various sections were recording—and with success—to court actions to stop picketing. Several have already secured injunctions against picketers "interfering" with business or employes, notably the Mt. Hope mill in Dighton and the Defiance plant in Barrowsville.

In Fitchburg, Fowers Hapgood, strike organizer and onetime Sacco-Vanzetti agitator and Weldon Cate of Spencer were both subjects of an action in which the Fitchburg Yarn Company sought to have the pair adjudged in contempt of court.

The action was based upon a charge that Hapgood and Cate picketed in the face of an injunction against picketing granted the millowners in superior court at Worcester last Wednesday.

LABOR IN RIGID QUIZ TO ALL CANDIDATES

By International News Service

Washington, Sept. 19—The American Federation of Labor, militantly leaping into the fall campaign, has demanded candidates for Congress promise to support specific legislation, including the 30-hour week and 6-hour day.

The action aroused consternation today among both Democratic and Republican candidates, including many who have had labor's endorsement for years.

A pledge of support is demanded as the price of labor's aid. The legislative program includes:

1—Extension of NRA, with section 7A, the labor section.

2—Unemployment insurance and similar legislation.

3—Measure similar to Wagner-Connery act outlawing company unions.

4—New program of public works as a relief measure.

QUESTIONNAIRE TO ALL

The attitude of the federation was stated in a letter and questionnaire sent to all candidates for Senate and House by William Green, its president.

Unless candidates respond favorably, Green's letter said, they will be listed as unfavorable. A "Yes" or "No" answer—without qualification—is demanded.

The specific questions put to the more than 1,000 candidates follow:

Will you vote for the extension of the National Recovery Act and retain therein Section 7-A, providing for the right to organize and bargain collectively; the prohibition of child labor and the elimination of unfair trade practices?

Will you support social justice legislation providing for old age pensions, unemployment insurance, work security and health protection?

Will you vote for a measure providing that all codes under the National Recovery Act should contain a 30-hour week and 6-hour day?

THE CONNERY BILL

Will you support legislation similar to the Wagner-Lewis bill introduced in the last session of Congress providing for unemployment insurance?

Will you support legislation similar to the Wagner-Connery labor disputes bill with amendments drafted and supported by the American Federation of Labor?

Will you support legislation providing adequate appropriation necessary for a public works program as a partial remedy for unemployment and for relief of dependent unemployed workers and their families?

As something of a warning, Green's letter told candidates the information was wanted for "30,000 local unions, 48 state federations and 108 national and international unions."

Brookline Girl Missing 3 Days

Active search was being conducted today for Margaret G. Jacobson, 15, blonde, daughter of Gustaf K. Jacobson of Rice street, Brookline, missing from her home since Sunday evening.

According to her father, she left to pay a visit to the home of a friend, Sunday evening, and has not been seen since.

Cashier Heads for Niagara

By Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 19—Betrayed, he said, by a women who fled with $25,000 he allegedly embezzled, a New York railroad station cashier was believed headed toward self destruction in Niagara Falls gorge today.

"I have been double crossed," a detective agency in Chicago said a letter they received bearing his name read. "I have made a mess of things. Now I am setting out for Niagara Falls, and when I get there I am going to jump into the gorge."

The missing cashier is Clifford S. Smith, alias Paul Davidson, cashier for the Long Island Railroad in the Pennsylvania station in New York, who fled on Labor Day.

The woman, the letter read, was with him in Chicago from September 4 to September 13, when she fled with $25,000 Smith, a married man and father of two children, entrusted to her.

Coast Swelters in Record Heat

Los Angeles, Sept. 19 (INS)—Southern California continued today to swelter in an almost unprecedented autumnal heat wave.

No relief was forecast following a day in which the mercury bubbled over at 98, the hottest day of the year, and sent thousands to the beaches. The day was the hottest September day since 1923, when 99 was recorded.

A SURPRISE FOR YOU, ladies . . . Dame Fashion is here! She's brought with her . . . oodles of gowns, the latest this year. Who is Dame Fashion? Why, nobody knows . . . or where she comes from, or whither she goes . . . She merely says, "Presto. Go alter your clothes." And we all obey her. "Why?" Nobody knows.

To the lilting rhymes along these lines a beautiful and largely attended fashion show was held in the magnificent clubroom of the Salada Tea Company on Stuart street, a museum of Oriental art, yesterday afternoon at tea-time . . . a bevy of debutantes and sub-debutantes modelled for Gross-Strauss and I. Miller.

POLLY GARDINER

Against a rare tapestry of ancient lineage, Miss Polly Gardiner (whom we think resembles the adorable Dorothy Stone of "As Thousands Cheer"), mannikined a sophisticated black crepe with white collar shot with gold and a dashing hat with bewitching nose veil . . . In the audience we noted her mother, Mrs. Evelyn Gardiner, and her well known and beloved aunt, Mrs. Larz Anderson. Mrs. Anderson wore a smart dark blue ensemble with natty Breton sailor—Mrs. Gardiner wore the summery printed silk under a navy coat. The Gardiners have just returned to their winter place at Beverly Farms after a month at The Bas in New Hampshire . . . Miss Polly is doing professional modelling, which is a popular pastime among the smart set . . . and quite lucrative.

Striking Creation

MRS. MALCOLM BRADLEY FRENCH was on hand to take in the last word in new designs for her fashion show to benefit the Charlotte Cushman Club which takes place at Seiler's Barclay next month . . . we glimpsed her in dashing Alpine sailor, loudly applauding the Bradshaw sisters, one modelling a striking creation of American beauty crepe for the cocktail hour and Miss Helen very mid-Victorian in old-blue satin with waterfall of curls . . . Little Mary Bradshaw made a delicate Dresden-like flower girl in the bridal procession in peche taffeta with a handful of gardenias . . .

The bride, tall, dark and lovely Julie Hammond, wore the austere satin of the mode lavishly trimmed with lace, her train of lace attaching at the waistline and being detachable . . . a very nice arrangement if one wishes to use the gown as an evening frock. The so-popular knee-length veil was caught to her hair cap shape and shaded the face. She carried an ivory prayer book which was the gift of Bishop Lawrence to Mrs. Louise Bruce Brooks on her wedding day. Mrs. Brooks was in the assembly to see her daughter, Mrs. Louise B. Van Everen, assist at the show . . .

Miss Helen Bond and Miss Gardiner were bridesmaids in pastel satins . . . Miss Charlotte Boyer of Needham wore sports frocks charmingly, a smart black and green wool being very becoming with her very blonde tresses . . .

Black Lace Trimmed With Tiny Red Bows

PRETTY LOUISE BALCH WAS THE center of admiration in a sheer black lace trimmed with tiny red bows . . . and Marian Davis, in brown two-piece chenille with green feather in her stroller, was effective. Others were Miss Betty Stoddard, Polly Bjornson, Sue Chamberlain, Marian Temple, who was outstanding in everything that she modelled, particularly a white shot with gold, and Marian Coombs. They all sauntered about the stage like professionals and were roundly applauded by the throng which packed the clubroom . . . Everyone takes the opportunity to visit this beautiful building which is unique as a place of business, being more like a museum of art than a mart of industry. Fragrant tea was served after the show to the patrons and Mr. Seiler donated delicious homemade cakes . . . How the Fair Things revel in these timely fashion shows!

We glimpsed Mrs. Albion Boothby in the so-smart dark blue, Mrs. Edward Bratton in a combination blue printed silk, her daughter, Miss Mabel (Bunny) Bratton, well-known secretary of the Harvard Twenty-Fivers, greeting a host of friends, Mrs. Lindley A. Bond, Mrs. Leland Bixby, Mrs. Alfred Collinson, Mrs. Otis Parker, Mrs. Ernest Beaufort and Mrs. Edith Mansur, the latter hostesses of the occasion.

Typical Play of New England

WE THOROUGHLY ENJOYED Coming Spring at the Plymouth last evening . . . it is rare entertainment, of a kind that will be understood by those who know their New England. It is not easy to put these hard-bitten people on the spotlight . . . they are not the kind of people who reveal themselves, but when a playwright such as Owen Davis opens the door of their closet and the family skeleton springs out, we are right with him. Some of the lines given to the maid-servant are priceless bits of wisdom of our Best People . . . such people as he writes about are very like the British in their fierce loyalties to their names and family, covering up crimes and misdemeanors for the sake of the family escutcheon. The cruelties, injustice and insincerity covered by the appelation SOCIETY is a subject we would like to write about . . . but it is so hard to sift the wheat from the chaff. What is right? What is wrong? What is expedient? Someday we hope there will be an aristocracy of the intelligent . . . maybe Coming Spring!

A NEW GOLD RUSH

A NEW GOLD RUSH is sweeping the country, not in Canyons or Gulches, but in old Bureau Drawers.

When President Roosevelt, with a stroke of his pen, increased the price of gold, it started millions of people searching in odd corners, old bureaus, chests and closets for gold, old gold (that is bits of out of date jewelry, dental gold and old watches). Today these are worth more than they have been for two generations.

FACES ARE FRAMED LIKE FLOWERS IN MARABOU, COQ PLUMES, OR LAME PETALS

MARABOU in a round half-cape lends its alluring softness to the skin, eyes and hair of its pretty wearer, who is Virginia Lee Major of Brookline. Miss Major models the day and evening accessories shown here, which fashion suggests as gay foils for gay faces.

METAL CLOTH plaided like taffeta in vivid peach, blue and gold is surprisingly supple. It drapes beautifully in this cheerful little collar, which has an unusual point in back, and a big bow and row of silver buttons under the chin in front. It's a miracle-worker on plain frocks.

ENOUGH SWISH and frou in this black transparent velvet triangle edged with white coq feathers to make you imagine yourself as the favorite screen star, at least for an evening. You may have it edged in ostrich, if you prefer; it is to be had in high shades or black.

FROSTY LAME petals make the perfect face-frame to show at the neck of a richly furred coat. It makes the high, flower-like neckline that determinedly stays with us; probably because we love things that cast a flattering glow on our everyday faces.

THE ABOVE evening and daytime accessories, chosen because of their regard for budget as well as fashion rules, are from a Boston shop; for further information, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, Liberty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Sophistication of a Woman of the World Captured In Crystal Flacon of Scent

By Juliet Shelby

If you are a very discriminating person, you usually want the best—even if you don't always get it? And right you should. We women know how easy it is to be charming and desired if we can dress in the latest of fashion, have personal attention for our skin and hair, and have leisure in which to relax and create an aura of exquisite feminine helplessness!

But we are not all fortunate darlings, pampered and petted. We use our strength to earn a living...or to take care of those whom we love. We have our daydreams and we enjoy them. We are pleasantly surprised when just one of them comes true!

If all your life you have wanted to possess a perfume, rich in its blend and ornate in its dressings, a perfume that has been long cherished by the smartest women of France and America, and one in whose wonderful fragrance you could luxuriate and have still more exciting daydreams, then that dream can come true.

For the makers of one of the loveliest perfumes ever blended have suddenly decided to make it possible for every woman to enjoy it at a price that compares favorably with perfumes of this calibre. In fact, it sells for less than some poorer blends. They have sacrificed the over-ornate dressings to give you more perfume for your money. Nice of them, I call it!

So if the depression did cruel things to your budget, or your husband's, or father's, or sweetheart's bank balance, you can still occasionally enjoy spending a night beautifully scented! And after all, being a discriminating person, it is better for you to have the best once in a while than something inferior often! And if you never have had a really lovely perfume, buy at least a dram and guard it with your life!

You may learn the name of this rare perfume and where it is sold by phoning Juliet Shelby, Liberty 4000. Or send a stamped self-addressed envelope to Miss Shelby, Boston Evening American, Boston, for this information.

Green Soap Treatment

Question: My face is almost covered with hard, white lumps that are similar in appearance to whiteheads. Please tell me the cause and cure.

T. C. H., Somerville.

Answer: The white lumps you mentioned are called "miliaria." They are caused by improper elimination in the sebaceous glands. First try to remove them with powdered pumice or green soap.

Signature of Widow

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My father passed away last month. Please tell me the correct way to address my mother's letters, and the correct way for her to sign checks, and so forth.

B.

All the forms of your mother's name remain just as they were before your father's death. A widow does not change the form of her signature in her letters or in checks. Her formal name the name on her visiting card or, for example, the name that she would sign on a hotel register, is still: Mrs. Henry Allen.

Her letters, both social and business, should always be addressed to Mrs. Henry Allen. Her checks she signs just as she did before your father's death: Mary Smith Allen. Her business letters, or letters to anyone who does not know her formal name, still should be signed:

Yours very truly,
Mary Smith Allen,
(Mrs. Henry Allen.)

Ruff Refusal Saves Trump Suit

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

The most common situation in which the Declarer must refuse to ruff the lead of a suit in which he is void occurs when he and the Dummy together hold only seven trumps, with only four in the longer hand. In most cases, when there are six cards of a suit outstanding they will not be divided 3-3. Hence if the Declarer uses one of his four trumps for ruffing, he will probably lose control of his trump suit.

Usually the factor which rescues the Declarer from trouble in such cases is the fact that sooner or later the Dummy will also be in a position to ruff the adversaries' long suit. This will allow the suit to be stopped while the Declarer still retains the advantage of his trump length. For example:

South, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♣ (1)	Pass
4 ♠ (2)	Pass	Pass (3)	Pass

(1) North does not wish to bid two no trump because he has no heart stopper and because South, with his two-suited hand, is unlikely to be able to supply the lack. But to bid three clubs over two spades would be merely showing a preference. North therefore decides to stake everything on a contract of five clubs if South is able to bid it.

(2) South knows what is in North's mind but does not feel that his hand justifies playing for eleven tricks. Having an exceptionally strong four-card spade suit, he decides that he would rather play for four spades if North had secondary support.

(3) South, so far as North can tell, may have five spades, since he rebid the suit. In any case, South obviously wants to play the hand in spades if North can help him at all.

West opened the heart King, and, upon receiving an encouraging discard for East, continued the suit. On the third round of hearts South made the play which assured his contract—although able to ruff, and win the trick, he discarded his ten of diamonds. He had now lost three tricks, but East and West could not win another trick because a heart continuation could be ruffed in Dummy and if East chose to lead either of the minor suits South could win the trick, draw trumps, and run his clubs.

If South had ruffed the third heart he would have lost the hand, because he would thus have established a spade trick for West and there still would have been a diamond to lose.

The play is not a difficult one and requires only attention to the conditions of the hand. It is always safer, when possible, to prepare for unfavorable division of the trump suit—particularly when such division is mathematically likely.

Your Last Chance to Preserve Summer Fruit

By MARTHA LEE

FROM MARTHA LEE'S WEDNESDAY MORNING BROADCAST OVER STATION WAAB

"LAST CHANCE," the sign used to announce at the end of the street in the rugged frontier towns.

Last Chance right now for those who like to put up fresh fruits. For grapes are having their day of colorful plenty. Fall in the air, the last of summer's brilliant sun is in the grapes and your pantry shelves are—probably—still pretty empty.

Grape jelly is, as most everyone knows, the most popular jelly in America, but there are other ways of preserving for later use the fine flavor of this juiciest of all fruits. Ripe grape jam, ripe grape conserve and ripe grape butter make excellent spreads and deserve a place in any well-rounded jam cupboard.

Try these recipes now, before it is too late, to fill all the yawning spots on your shelves.

RIPE GRAPE CONSERVE

3 cups (1½ lbs.) prepared fruit
5 cups (2¼ lbs.) sugar
1 cup nut meats, finely chopped
½ lb. seeded raisins
½ bottle fruit pectin

To prepare fruit, stem and crush thoroughly about 2 pounds fully ripe grapes. Add ¼ cup water and simmer, covered, 30 minutes. With tight-skinned grapes, add juice of 1 lemon to water. Sieve hot mixture.

Measure sugar into large kettle. Add nuts, raisins and prepared fruit, filling up last cup with water if necessary. Mix well and bring to a full rolling boil over hottest fire. Stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard 1 minute. Remove from fire and stir in bottled fruit pectin. Then stir and skim by turns for just 5 minutes to cool slightly, to prevent floating fruit. Pour quickly. Paraffin hot conserve at once. Makes about 9 glasses, 6 fluid ounces each.

COMBINATION RIPE GRAPE JELLY AND BUTTER

Stem about seven pounds fully ripe grapes and crush thoroughly. Add ¼ cup water, cover, and simmer 3 minutes. Place fruit in flannel jelly bag to drip. To hasten dripping, turn pulp over about every five minutes, without opening jelly bag, by holding bag on each side and stretching cloth, thus bringing to bottom of bag. Drip until 4 cups juice have run through. Use juice for ripe grape jelly recipe below).

Sieve pulp left in bag to remove skins and seeds. Use sieved pulp for ripe grape butter (receipe below).

RIPE GRAPE JELLY

7½ cups (3¼ lbs. sugar)
4 cups (2 lbs.) juice
½ bottle fruit pectin.

Measure sugar and grape juice, as prepared above, into large saucepan and mix. Bring to a boil over hottest fire and at once add bottled fruit pectin, stirring constantly. Deep Armhole Is Paris Vogue

By MARIAN MARTIN

PATTERN 9161

Let us start right out talking about the deep armholes. They are one of the very smartest features of this frock—which is the reason attention has been called to them by a little row of buttons front and back. Paris is making a big fuss over armholes of this kind this season, and they do, undoubtedly, give a frock an air of chic. Other than this the model is very simple except for a most becoming round collar ending in an ascot scarf, and a nice neat pair of darts. But its simplicity is of the sort that spells smartness in terms which no one can possibly misunderstand.

Pattern 9161 may be ordered only in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36 and 38. Size 16 requires 3¼ yards 39 inch fabric and ⅞ yard contrasting.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for EACH MARIAN MARTIN pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE of each pattern.

THE FALL AND WINTER ISSUE of the MARIAN MARTIN PATTERN BOOK is now off the press. It is big fashion news . . . and delightful reading . . . filled with stunning and easy-to-make patterns for street and house dresses, blouses, skirts, lingerie, sports clothes . . . all the essentials of a smart outfit for matron, maiden or little child. PRICE OF BOOK FIFTEEN CENTS. BOOK AND PATTERN TOGETHER TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.

Send your order to Boston American Pattern Department, 232 W. 18th Street, New York, N. Y.

GIVEN IN MARRIAGE —:— By Adele Garrison

CHAPTER 144

I CAUGHT my breath in astonishment at Carolyn's bizarre request to let Avis Arlen know, after the departure of Mary and Noel, the nature of the clever ruse to foil Avis' determination to see the bridegroom alone, which Ronald's beautiful sister had just broached.

"Oh! lovely fun!" Marion gurgled in lifelike imitation of Avis. "Whoa, meowing now!" Bab demanded, and I saw that he and Ronald were still rebelling at the roles for which Carolyn's scheme was casting them.

"We are," Marion answered promptly. "And we don't care who knows it. All rules go by the board where that apology for living is concerned. She's out to do wrong by our Mary, and we're going to do her plenty. And you're going to do your share and say 'thank you!'"

"It looks to me as though we were going to be the prime goats of the whole thing," Ronald grumbled, then as both his sister and Marion on whom his youthful affections are centered, whirled on him accusingly, he threw up both hands in token of surrender.

TO "RUSH" AVIS

"But we'll go through with it, won't we, Bob?"

"Surest thing you know," Bob agreed, and I saw sparkling in his eyes the mischievous diablerie which has caused him to be dubbed by his associates as "the biggest devil in Yale." "In fact, I'm beginning to see points in this plan. There's no use making martyrs of ourselves over it old bean. We might as well get some enjoyment out of it as we go along. And then Arlen isn't altogether without charm, you know. Shes' not the world's wettest smack."

But Ronald was in no mood for flattery.

"She's a strong runner-up," he said viciously.

"I'm leaving everything to you, now," I told them as I started for the door. "And I'm not giving you any more advice or directions, except to ask you to get hold of Bill and Hank as soon as possible. You see I shall be back here with Avis, barring accidents, in a little over two hours, so you must be ready."

"What about the rehearsal of the wedding procession?" Carolyn asked. "Do we have to wait for that sap to get here, before we put it on?"

"I don't think you'll be ready before," I said pleasingly. "If you are, you may go through with it once without her, but you'll have to do it over when she comes. We can't get out of that without being deliberately rude, you see that?"

"Of course," Carolyn said promptly, and Marion's patient sober comment followed me out of the door.

"There's only one person to consider," she said. "Marion." She has enough with having this pest as a bridesmaid without being worried with anything else. We simply must keep the rest of this mess from her. Come on, let's get hold of Bill and Hank. You'll have to get started on your vamping program, Carol, so as to have Hank well hobbled by the time dear Avis gets here. I'll concentrate on Bill, and you two boys can think up ways to charm Avis into forgetting Noel ever existed."

Disgusted emphatic expletives from the two enamored youths punctuated her words, but as I went rapidly up the stairs toward my room, I knew that at least four of them would do their best to foil Avis in her plan to see Noel alone, in the wild hope, I was sure, of making some final breach between the two lovers, whose wedding ceremony was now only a matter of hours.

Dicky was waiting for me in my room, a quizzical expression on his face.

"Where's the fire?" he asked. "From the way old Harry hustled me out of my room and over here, I expected at least to see you brandishing a fire axe and dragging a length of hose."

"I feel as if I were dragging an entire hook and ladder outfit," I retorted, "and so will you when I tell you what I want of you."

"Shoot when you're ready," he said.

BURNS AND ALLEN RESUMING RADIO NETWORK ACTIVITY

Joining the parade of program personalities now working a way back into the fall and winter broadcasting schedules, funmaking George Burns and Gracie Allen are present and pending. Their renewal comes to pass tonight (WNAC) from 9:30 until 10 o'clock.

These two self styled purveyors of the pun, as stated here some days ago, do not bring the Guy Lombardo musical group with them. Guy goes along with his new "Lombardo Land" loudspeaker turn. Every Wednesday night for quite awhile to come, however. Burns and Allen will carry on with "The Adventures of Gracie" which is by way of making known their air attraction title. Music and sound effects to be employed as a microphone means of transporting the pair to Italy, France, England and Russia, where they are to establish mythical settings for their buffoonery.

Gracie Allen

An exciting period is predicted as the true Christmas Holiday will come out of the ether (WNAC) with 10:30 to 11 p. m. Famous problems with which the federal government have been confronted during 1934 is the inspiration whereby these plays take shape.

Col. Henry Roosevelt, another of the famous family by that name, and now Asst. Secretary of the Navy, speaks during that "Radio Forum" presentation (WEEI) originating in Washington at 21:30 tonight.

MOMENTS WITH McCORMACK

John McCormack, on these shores again following a tour of European concert halls, enters upon his second radio recital series tonight (WEZ) as of 9:30 p. m. William Daly directs the orchestral accompaniment for McCormack solos, heading an all string instrumented group.

Also on the seasonal comeback list, with renewal slated for tonight, is the original and Champion long distance fast talking of Floyd Gibbons. Floyd figures in a brand new network (WEEI) niche, the time being reserved for every Wednesday night henceforth at 10:30.

Mutineers Kill Eight

Harbin, Sept. 19 (INS)—Killing eight passengers, Manchu guards on the steamer Kinkpou mutinied and looted the vessel today on the Sungari river. Five Japanese were among those slain. The guards escaped with a large quantity of opium.

This Ear—
—That Air

N. F. T.

Irene Beasley, termed the "long tall gal from Dixie," has just been declared "Radio Queen of 1934" as a result of votes cast by listeners from Maine to California.

Coronation ceremonie took place this week at the Electrical and Radio show within Madison Square Garden walls in New York. Irene inspired 28,432 ballots. Dorothy Page, Jessica Dragonette, Rosemary Lane, Annette Hanshaw, Kate Smith and others were in the runnerup places.

Tonight the new royalty is singing her appreciation from coast to coast at 10:30, but the program isn't given a spot on Boston schedules, due to a political placement arranged on the WEEI channels.

"N.F.T."

ACCIDENTAL ACQUAINTANCE

Now we learn that Freeman (Amos) Gosden, met Charlie (Andy) Correll when the former was playing with a show in Peoria, Ill., Charley was a bricklayer in the Illinois city at one time, then took to piano pattering and dancing in a swanky night club. There they encountered each other and matched their darky dialect. Quick as a flash they teamed, and the result is obvious.

Admirers of Tony Wons in Chadwick, Ohio, belong to a going strong club formed among his fan following. Members even have a published organ called "Wons-Overs," and Tony himself bought the first yearly subscription.

WHO SHALL NOT PASS?

It happened at a recent out-of-doors public event. Newspaper photographers had been busy for an hour getting camera "shots" of all that took place. Their autos were parked up side roads and on inclines. One radio announcer perched his "mike" smack in the middle of one of said side roads. He likewise "arranged" with a local copper not to permit any cars to pass out until his talking turn at that point was concluded. Along came a photographer aiming to pull into the main road and get his pictures into his paper post haste. There stood the officer with a determined "nothing doing" attitude. When the picture taking chap said he would get out of his car within a minute and do some double-barrelled broadcasting into that sound box, the cop thought better of holding him up. Whereupon the announcer agreed it might be better to usher him through. In fact the broadcaster had nothing more to do with it.

GAS INVENTOR SEES U. S. WAR

By Associated Press

Monticello, N. Y., Sept. 19—Referring to a statement made before the Senate munitions committee last week, describing him as an "international spy," Philip del Fungo Giera, proprietor of the "mystery laboratory" in Sullivan County hills, said today he had been in the employ of the United States government since 1914.

He declined, however, to discuss his connections with the government, stating he would give that information when called before the committee next week.

He said "the Teapot Dome scandal would appear like a tea party" after he tells what he knows.

"If I spill all there will be a war among five countries including the United States," he added.

He said he had recently perfected a "sleeping gas" capable of putting an army to sleep within a minute. He said he would offer this to the government.

Leona Hogarth saw the opening of "Coming Spring," Owen Davis' new play, from a forward row at the Plymouth Theater. This good actress was cast originally for the important role of "Ella," the spinster-sister of the Levenseller family, who was "disappointed" in love. She rehearsed one day in the part and was stricken with appendicitis. Now she has recovered and will assume her role either Friday or Saturday.

A Boston experiment in something extremely unorthodox in theatricals will be attempted here shortly by Linus Travers, the popular radio impresario. Mr. Travers and a group of associates will operate the main ballroom of the Hotel Kenmore as a dine, wine and dance theater. He will present such shows as "Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model," "The Bowery After Dark," and perhaps "A Polish Wedding" on Saturday and Sunday evenings, and the customers will be invited to sup and imbibe while they enjoy the entertainment. This is a variation of the New York offering of "The Drunkard," by Albert Bannister, to the accompaniment of clinking steins and touching glasses. The date of the premiere is not too far ahead.

I have yet to see printed in the sports columns a review of the marvelous birthday tribute paid Lou Smith, owner of Rockingham Park, Sunday night. Mr. Smith's popularity was attested by the appearance without fees of Lucille Ballantine, Pavlowa of the ballroom dancers and Paul Pierce, of "A Thousands Cheer," who make their debut tomorrow at the Hotel Touraine, and of Virginia Heath and Mimi Parks, and Sidway and Fay, from the Cocoanut Grove. Boston's best accompanist, Joe Solomon, also of the Cocoanut Grove, played for the artists.

It is unfortunate that James O'Neill and Jerry Cohan cannot be present at the Plymouth theater when the Theater Guild presents its first offering of the season, October 1. For these two gentlemen, now dead, would undoubtedly be interested in seeing their sons working hand in glove. Eugene O'Neill wrote "Ah, Wilderness," and George M. Cohan plays its leading role.

The sons of these two greats of the present day Broadway were guests of the same street in their day—which was a very different day. James O'Neill was one of America's outstanding actors, famous for "The Count of Monte Cristo," in which he toured the land. This, of course, is the Dumas opus which has been made also into the fine picture now playing at Keith's Memorial theater. James O'Neill toured the land in "The Count of Monte Cristo," and a very old-timer named Charles Westburn gave me, and I hope you, a laugh early today, when he told of one of the elder O'Neill experiences in Boston.

"The world is mine!" From the first balcony came the query: 'What'll you take for Chelsea?' (P.S. note: I can't vouch for the truth of this.)

James O'Neill and Jerry Cohan were prime movers in the founding of the Catholic Actors' Guild. They sat by each other's side at all the early meetings of that famous organization, not dreaming that their offspring some day would meet in the theater as a matter-of-fact. Eugene O'Neill and George M. Cohan met for the first time when rehearsals for "Ah Wilderness!" began. They became good friends at once and one of the high spots of the preparatory days of the play was the co-operation of these two.

JOSEPHINE HUTCHINSON ASSIGNED LEADING ROLE IN 'THE RIGHT TO LIVE'

George Brent and Colin Clive Also Given Featured Parts in Maugham's Story

Los Angeles, Sept. 19—Somerset Maugham's "Sacred Flame" furnished a lesson to all of us movie columnists. For months we have been casting it. And here's the irony of the situation. Not one of us guessed a single name correctly. "Sacred Flame" under the new—and to me doubtful title, "The Right to Live," goes into production at Warner Brothers next week with a surprising cast.

Louella O. Parsons

According to Hal Wallis (so this time our casting should be correct) Josephine Hutchinson has the feminine lead, George Brent and Colin Clive are the head men and William Keighley is set to direct. Ralph Bloch has been nominated to write the scenario and to see that all of Mr. Maugham's best situations are kept intact.

Joan Bennett, who thought she was fat, has taken off that extra half ounce are considered unbecoming and is all set on a film program. Joanie did "The Pursuit of Happiness" for Paramount and this coming after "Little Women" has given the Hollywood producers an idea of her talents. Schulberg and Feldman today completed a deal whereby she goes to Universal for the lead in "The Man Who Reclaimed His Head," starring Claude Rains. Interesting that Lloyd Hughes, erstwhile leading man who hasn't been on the screen in three years, is coming back in the Bennett-Rains picture, also Phyllis Brooks, artists' model debuting.

This is baby year in Hollywood. Every company is trying to outShirley little Shirley Temple, has some particular youngster who is being groomed to conquer the nation. Here's Baby Jane, claimed by Universal to be the youngest talking motion picture actress in captivity. Shirley is five and Baby Leroy can not yet talk. Little Jane has been in four Universal pictures and now she is to get her own starring vehicle, "Straight From the Heart," an original written for her by Doris Anderson. And just as the younger will earn her money, she will also be in "Ziegfeld Follies."

Nina Koshetz, one of the very best singers now in Hollywood, is in the cast of "Sister Madame." This leads us and many others to wonder if Eileen Landi will really sing Tosca in the same picture. While Darryl Zanuck is paging Norman Krasna and urging him to please return to Hollywood, Norman is seriously studying dancing. He's got a play in New York but honestly he'd rather dance than write or eat or anything else. Buster Collier sends a postcard to tell us that he is on the high seas on the Europa headed for home and Hollywood.

Snapshots of Hollywood

RUTH CHATTERTON out of town, not to escape her divorce suit but to get rid of a trouble some cold that has hung on for weeks; the little crowd of literati who belong to the Viertel coterie gathers at an after theater dinner given by MAX REINHARDT, GRETA GARBO, SARI VIERTEL, closest friend, making a brief appearance HAL MOHR, EVELYN VENABLES proof that intrigue is the most interested spectator at the Bowl, just about everybody at the LEIGHANDRO party to which it continues for a few nights more; white flannelled pants noted MARLENE DIETRICH and JOE STERNBERG and the Dietrich husband were dressed exactly alike at the party as matter; WARNER BAXTER and RONALD COLMAN and RICHARD BARTHELMESS getting over pointers from SHIELDS [illegible] SHIELDS, by the way, so handsome she is proof that he may go into movies, everyone who didn't spend the day at the beach attending the tennis matches, as MERVYN LEROYS entertained a large party at cocktails and everyone discussed the whirl in which all Hollywood is suddenly plunged itself; MATT MOORE and AILEEN PRINGLE, who continue year after year to be the best pals in all movieland dining tete-a-tete; MR. AND MRS. CHARLES BUTTERWORTH giving a large party; GROUCHO MARX and CHARLIE PUNNING a close second on their humor, AUSTIN PARKER advancing the Pam Spurge season by moving down there now, IRENE COURTNEY hostess at a dinner party; ANITA PAGE and HEINRICH NACIO BROWN, whose marriage in Mexico isn't legal in the U.S., taking things over in a quiet cafe. That's all today.

PLANES HUNT LOST HARVARD BOYS

This Is Life
by
ROBERT E. ROGERS

Robert E. Rogers

The betting ought to be brisk on the primaries tomorrow, on the Democratic primaries, that is. There's no difficulty making up one's mind about what will happen to the Republicans. Mr. Bacon will be nominated like clockwork and will be defeated in November, equally like clockwork. The G. O. P.'s are so hopelessly out of it, and will remain so until they develop some candidates, that the only problem is whether the state is going to uphold Roosevelt and the New Deal or abide by the old-fashioned Democracy which virtually repudiates the New Deal.

It seems to me a curiously simple and clean-cut problem. It is not complicated, as it was in Maine, by the problem of whether the voters must endorse or repudiate the incumbent in office. There, many people who were lukewarm to the New Deal liked Governor Brann and his record. It is not complicated, as it was in California, by the necessity of a choice between the administration and something far more radical than the administration.

In Massachusetts the only question is: Do you prefer the unquestioning adherence to the Roosevelt ideals and program which has been publicly and undeviatingly displayed by Mr. Curley since the summer of 1932—or do you prefer the lukewarm and critical and conservative Democracy represented by the candidate of the very moderate Roosevelt an, Senator Walsh, and the President's most outstanding Democratic critic, Governor Ely.

The eyes of Democracy are on Massachusetts. The situation is unique. Maine and California were still reckoned Republican states. Massachusetts has been generally considered to have moved definitely into the Democratic column. Is this new and powerful convert to the party going to represent the old Jeffersonian party or the New Deal?

There can be no doubt that General Cole represents party influences apathetic as to Mr. Roosevelt's plans or actually hostile to them. Equally there can be no doubt that Mr. Curley has always been consistently on the line for the President. Furthermore his entire record as to political administration (the philosophy of job-holding, the relation of the state to the under-privileged citizen, the financing of public works, and all that has been absolutely parallel with Mr. Roosevelt's.

What he has accomplished in terms of the city of Boston is fairly comparable to what the President has been doing in terms of western dams, forestry, the Tennessee Valley Authority and other great work-making projects. Just as the administration invented the CCC to avoid the breadlines, so Mr Curley in his own way made Boston one of the few cities in the country without a breadline and did it largely without federal aid.

His sentiments about the Forgotten Man are and always have been Mr. Roosevelt's. In spite of the fact that the President has shown little gratitude for his services and little acknowledgment of his loyalty in policies—"eaten bread is soon forgotten"—there are few men in this country who better deserve the endorsement of the New Deal. The Democracy of Massachusetts now has an opportunity to give Mr Curley—by proxy—his Chief's endorsement.

The logic of this seems to me so clear that I wrote it all out, back in July, not long after the Worcester convention. But it got lost somehow, and didn't appear. I have had no reason since to change my mind. If logic means anything in politics, the sympathizers of Cole, Ely and Walsh might just as well vote for Bacon and the Republican ticket and the defenders of the Constitution. There is where the great divide lies. The issues lie not between Republican and Democrat, but between the Roosevelt-Sinclair type of "liberal" and the Bacon-Ely type of "conservative." Mr. Curley, with his long record of effective sympathy for the poor and his broad conception of the powers of government to uphold human rights at the expense of property rights should, of right, be recognized as one of Roosevelt's right-hand men.

In the matter of political genius and administrative experience, between the two candidates, there can be no comparison. In sheer knowledge of the complex workings of modern political organization, Mr Curley is admittedly a master. He has been not merely a notable mayor but pretty certainly a great mayor. His record assures that he will be a notable governor. Personalities of his considerable caliber are too rare among us. We cannot afford to retire him to private life.

Personally, I should like to see Massachusetts hand a sweeping and stinging rebuke to Mr. Roosevelt and the Brain trusters. But since that is not remotely possible since the G. O. P. hasn't the chance of a tallow cat in the hot place, I'd like to see the New Deal given a chance to be represented by a man thoroughly in sympathy with it, instead of by a group of non-co-operators, by a powerful administrator, a hard fighter, whose record of service for Boston and Massachusetts is long and consistent.

That is the only way I can see of giving the New Deal a chance to show what it really can do in Massachusetts.

ESCORTS RULE COCKTAIL HOURS NOW

Girls—If you want a snifter after a hard afternoon of bridge or shopping, grab it before 7 o'clock.

After that hour, it at least one of the Back Bay hotels, won't be with out escorts will henceforth be barred from bars and cocktail lounges.

Protests long and loud were expected to follow the ruling. Although the hotel taking the step declared that other hotels would follow in issuing similar action, a surprisingly large amount of the liquor business done in fashionable drinking places is said to be with women.

The "cocktail hours" of the late afternoon have been particularly popular with fair drinkers. It was feared that the enforcement of the rule against unescorted women would cost the hotels a large amount of business.

The new rule against unescorted women was put into effect voluntarily by the management of a Back Bay caravanserai after police complained to the licensing board that women in the hotel's bar were being "picked up" by men patrons. The board placed the complaint on file after the hotel agreed to require women to be accompanied by escorts for their evening drinking.

The licensing board revoked the license of the Queensboro Athletic Association, formerly the Club Fauteuil, on complaints of the clergy of St. James' Church.

THE DANCE STEPS THAT END AT THE PULPIT

AN EXPRESSION OF BEAUTY IN THE DANCE

AN OFFERING TO THE GODS

CHURCH TO SEE UNSHOD DANCE

While the choristers of the First Parish Unitarian Church in Waltham sing the 150th Psalm, a brilliantly costumed bare-foot dancer will wend her way down the middle aisle, bearing a brass incense

The dancer who will take part in this demonstration of the dance as an expression of religion next Sunday is Miss Erica Thimey, a member of the Liberal Church of Germany.

Miss Thimey for the past two years has been giving her dances in Chicago and was formerly a pupil of the Mary Wigman School of Dance in Dresden.

Reel and Langone Contest Watched

Interest in the second Suffolk senatorial contest today centered about the showing to be made by A. Frank Reel, young Boston attorney, opposing Senator Joseph A. Langone, Jr., on a New Deal platform.

Reel, a graduate of Harvard College and Harvard law school, was the first president of the Young Democrats of Massachusetts. He has been waging an aggressive campaign.

CANOE VOYAGE IS HALTED BY BAD WEATHER

While official plans of the Canadian government continued the search today for two missing Harvard Law School students and a guide on a canoe trip a power of forestry workers set out to scour the dense forests of northern Ontario.

Search was begun for the two, Stephen P. Francheot, 23, of Charles River square, Back Bay, and David Riesman, Jr., 23, of Philadelphia when Francheot failed to appear at the wedding of his sister here in Boston last Saturday.

Government rangers said early today that, due to the bad weather the boys might easily have been delayed on their canoe trip into the Timagami region and would be safe if they had been able to find refuge in some cabin.

Last available information concerning the boys came from a fire ranger at Evelyn Lake, who reported seeing two youths whose description tallied closely with that of the missing students.

A letter was said to have been left by Francheot there for his father, Edward Ellis Francheot, of Niagara Falls, New York, but it was learned through the boy's mother early today that it had never been received.

Both boys were honor students at Harvard College. Riesman, a graduate of the class of 1931, was a Phi Beta Kappa student and assistant managing editor of the Harvard Crimson. He also was assistant manager of the freshman crew and a member of the Harvard Liberal Club.

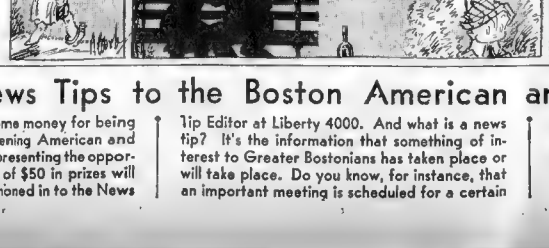
SCREAMS START KIDNAP HUNT

After two citizens had reported that they had heard the screams of a young woman from a car passing over the Neponset bridge, Dorchester and Quincy police today were working on the possibility of a kidnaping.

The calls from the citizens came within a few minutes of each other. The registration number of a car was given by the second informant.

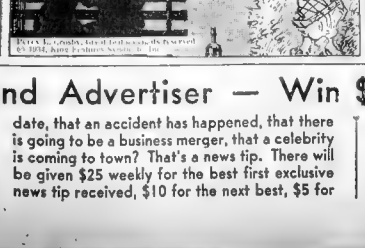
According to the first phone call, several young men in an auto apparently were keeping the girl a prisoner in the car.

SKIPPY



WELL, I THINK I'LL SEE HOW ANOTHER BOTTLE OF SKIPPY'S ROMANCE-MIXTURE IS WORKIN' OUT.
TODAY I THOUGHT FIVE O'CLOCK WOULD NEVER COME—I LOOKED FORWARD TO THIS MEETING SO MUCH. OH, DARLING, TO THINK I AM HOLDING YOUR HAND.
OH, YOU WILL NEVER UNDERSTAND HOW MUCH I LOVE YOU AND HOW TERRIBLY SAD IT MAKES ME FEEL WHEN I PASS A JEWELER'S WINDOW AND KNOW I CAN'T GIVE YOU ALL THE JEWELS.

There Is More Than Enough



THERE'S TWO JEWELS I WOULD RATHER HAVE THAN ALL THE JEWELS IN THE WORLD AND THOSE ARE YOUR LIPS, SAYING," I LOVE YOU MORE THAN ANY WOMAN IN THE WORLD AND I WILL BE TRUE TO YOU FOREVER AND EVER."
THAT'S VERY, VERY SWEET AND I TAKE NOTICE THERE WAS A MOON OUT, TOO. I'M GOIN' TO RUSH HOME AND PUT FIVE MORE BOTTLES IN THAT SPOT THERE'S MORE THAN ENOUGH TO GO ROUND.

DEWING FIGHTS MILLEN DELAY

With today the headline for further motions by the counsel for the Millen brothers and Graham Baker for an extension of time, District Attorney Edmund L. Dewing announced that Judge Nelson P. Brown would have to wait for the Superior Court before passing on motions already filed.

Following a conference with Judge Brown, District Attorney Dewing said that he was opposed to any further attempt by the counsel for the prisoners to file further motions

NEW YORK
DAY BY DAY

New York, Sept. 19—Don Skene is still another sports writer to cut a literary figure with a best seller. His hilarious travesty of championship prizefighting is achieving the top list. Following so closely upon Damon Runyon's fiction success, it has sent publishers scouring the sports pages.

While Charles Van Loan and Ring Lardner were notable examples of attainment in short story writing, their output was regarded as exceptional. Sports writers were rarely considered for the magazines' novels or photoplay. Their work was too haphazard and swiftly done.

O. O. McIntyre

What could a fellow reporting baseball, boxing and tennis know about skillful plotting, dialogue and the essential called sentiment? Well, beneath the hard-boiled exteriors it appears they know all about emotion. Indeed, they have given the whole art of fiction story telling a change of pace.

Anyway, it is the sports writers' field day. All are being sounded for material. A check-up reveals that such writers as Gene Fowler, Westbrook Pegler, Heywood Broun, Paul Gallico and innumerable others so frequently contributing to the magazines, had their genesis on the sport page.

Chic Sale and Art Frank are about the only chinpiece comics left on the stage. Ten years ago every vaudeville show and almost every play had a Reuben with crepe hair, nasal twang and apple-barrel gab. The lack is not in audience interest but in deft delineation. The yap comedian must have a rural background and know his crossroads. Outside of Sale and Frank most of them in recent years were city actors portraying a role they got from comic papers.

Charles Butterworth has been a success on the stage and screen largely because the gawky role he played has a prototype in every village. The querulous, wry-necked fellow with an innocent blink whose apparently dumb blurts really had the meat of philosophy.

Back yonder reflections sometime make me wonder if the little red school house has not received more than its share of hoots. There has grown up with the modern child and new fangled training an inclination to criticize all elders including parents. I heard a 14-year-old girl in a pet the other day say to her mother: "I did not ask to be born and certainly not for you to be my parent." Some little old red school house strap oil would be just dandy for that.

There is a distinct type of woman diner-out one sees in the more sedate chain restaurants. She comes in alone, plainly tailored, middle-aged, alertly professional, lights a cigarette and appears wholly pre-occupied. She has soup, salad, dessert and coffee and lingers over perhaps two more cigarettes. One imagines a doctor, lawyer or executive assistant. I inquired of a Julia Hoyt looking hostess about the identity of one the other day. She was a housekeeper of a Park avenue de luxe hotel and I wondered what in the world she was doing eating out. The housekeeper at the Ritz Carlton, incidentally, is a real Countess.

The Martin Johnsons, rounding in from another long jungle safari, have been catching up with well-dressed civilization again. Mrs. Johnson, chirpy and with a flair for barbaric colors, is reminiful of Ann Pennington. Her husband might be a middle west merchant attending a Rotarian convention. They have never shaken off the open friendliness of the Kansas plains, where they were born and reared. Each time they bring back a thoroughly domesticated pet. The last time it was Bessie, an ourang-utan, and this time a smaller type of monkey almost human in understanding. The Martins usually feel the call of the wild again in about six months and begin another trek to some tag end of the earth. I have been told that when they eventually give up their wanderlust they will settle on farmland — if any is left — in western Kansas.

Three times lately on West End avenue I have been accosted by a smartly turned out young man, who professes to be a Columbia student from Capetown, South Africa. Each time with becoming awkwardness he has confessed it is his first approach at begging and wants only a room for the night. He is expecting a cable. The third time I reminded him of two other contacts with the same story. Immediately he bristled indignantly: "All right, what are you going to do about it?" And after mature reflection about all I can do is write this little paragraph. And go right back to my thumb twiddling.

Every clout, ferocious, hearty,

Hockey Clan Gathers To Break Deadlock; Holy Cross' Novelty

Bowser on Tour; No Upper Deck For Fenway Park

By AUSTEN LAKE

LATEST BLOW-BY-BLOW ACCOUNT of the hockey battle between the Bruins and the Boston Garden finds George V. Brown and C. F. Adams blocking handily. Brown still leads with his roundhouse $80,000 rental demand and Adams counters with the same offer of a graduated scale of percentages. Both boys are fresh and show no sign of weakening.

Austen Lake

Today Frank Calder, the stout, parson-like president of the league, who is known as the "Great Pacifier," is trying to break the clinch. He, Adams, Frank Patrick (the new bench boss) and Art Ross have been spending the morning with Brown, but the yelps of "percentage" and "$80,000" still drown out an agreement.

So this morning Adams said, "Well it looks as though the Garden cannot afford to rent their plant at a figure we can afford to pay, and, much as I regret it, it begins to appear that the Bruins will not play this winter."

IT IS POSSIBLE THAT THE GARDEN DOES not want the Bruins' trade at any price, and is dallying with the thought that dog racing, if legalized next November, will make over their white elephant into a gold mine.

Meanwhile, the Garden's dream of the slinky, weasel hounds with their bodkin bellies and the prospective shower of public betting, has put the Bruins in an awkward spot.

With the start of the training season, less than a month away, no player contracts have been sent out, and no attempt has been made to strengthen the club by trades.

The Garden wants more than $3000 a night, or, it will rent the Arena for $2500. Adams today showed me his certified auditor's report of last season, which listed the cost of each home game in 1933, inclusive of a nightly $1900 rental, as totalling $9099.92.

Like Mae West, he might have said, "I'm no angel."

TOM McCABE, THE UP AND AT 'EM DIRECTOR at Holy Cross, has installed an electric timing clock for his football game, a novelty that may soon become standard in big college games.

The giant clock, placed plainly at one end of the field, is as accurate as a fine stop watch and will be controlled electrically by two rival timers on the sidelines. They will stop it for "times out," taking their cues from the referee.

Thus the field judge's chief task, which was to clutch his little silver time piece and try to click it on and off in the right places, has been abolished at Fitton Field. It was an embarrassing job, too, because sometimes when he stumbled, the stem release would snap and the recording hand return to zero, a fatal matter if you please

And sometimes between the quarters the rival coaches, checking his time from the sidelines, would come out with an ugly pucker on their pusses and say, "You lost 20 seconds that period and please pay attention."

Now at Holy Cross there will be only one giant creeping finger to watch, perceptible to officials, players and spectators alike.

HERR PAUL BOWSER, THE DEAN OF THE BOSTON chapter of the wrestling union, is chuffing westward to see Strangler Lewis wrestle in Chicago and to have an eyeful of the World Fair. Then, bending sharply southward, he is going to call in at Lexington, Ky., to watch his harness dobbins race. It is a vigorous life of hardship, this overlordship of the Lunkies.

SAYS EDWARD TROWBRIDGE COLLINS, the Calif of the Red Sox, "We will never build a double deck on Fenway Park It would cost $500,000 and hardly be used more than half a dozen times a year." Eddie is a cozy conversationalist. For example:

Q.—"What's your opinion of the way Bucky Harris has handled the team?"

A.—"I think he done as well as possible."

Q.—"Will he be back again next year?"

A.—"That," business of buttoning lips and frowning, "is a question we have not yet considered. You are the first person that has asked."

BARRING MORTAL INJURY TO THE GOOD ship Endeavour, it looks as though the America Cup is coming out of its N. Y. Y. C. closet for a long journey overseas. If so, it will mark England's greatest year in international sport. Henry Cotton (British Open), Perry Perry (Davis Cup and Wimbledon tennis singles), Dorothy Round (Wimbledon ladies' singles), Jake Lovelock outran our Bill Bonthron, Cavalcade, a British horse, is the leading three-year-old of the season. Alone, all, all alone, was Lawson Little, American winner of the British amateur golf.

HARD TO PLEASE, IRRECONCILABLES, ARE NEW YORK boxing experts. They wailed lustily when Barney Ross received the decision over Jimmy McLarnin last May. Then, switching fickley to Ross before Monday night's battle, they howled when McLarnin was awarded the match.

All this squalling has a rich commercial value, presaging another and third match between the two, which I hear will come in Chicago next summer.

IMAGINE THE STATE OF MIND OF BUCK NEWSOME, the St. Louis Browns pitcher, who allowed the Red Sox one hit in a ten-inning game, and LOST 2 to 1. And that too, despite the fact that the Browns made ten hits.

In baseball a "red necked" pitcher is one who grows crimson around the gills when his mates make errors. Patience in pitching is a cardinal, No. 1 virtue. One recalls how Lon Warneke of the Cubs, broke a stove in the Braves dressing room after losing a close game two years ago. And the following visit of the same team saw Manager Charley Grimm throwing a chair through a transom for the same reason. Yet Newsome, according to the story, merely swallowed his grief and make no complaint. There was so little to say.

The Major Adds Pony Duty to Tasks as Everett Good Luck Mascot

CAPT. RALPH FREEMAN — BARRY GILDEA — THE MAJOR

Very proud of his precious burden is The Major, Everett high's 195-pound football mascot, as he holds seven months young Barry Gildea on his broad back. Capt. Freeman, center of the Everett team, acts as groom, while Daddy Gildea keeps Barry smiling. The Major for a mascot, Everett's gridmen are sure they're headed for a championship season. EVERETT HIGH BOASTS TWO MASCOTS

By Bill Connell

Two winning mascots for any school football team should be a safe reason to dream the future. So it is that Everett High gridmen are sure they have the pride cleaned as good as sewed up.

Barry Gildea, seven months young son of Coach Denny Gildea and The Major are the very good reasons for Everett's high hopes. Barry enters the picture as Gildea's heir, and prospective All-American center.

Not that Denny would mind Barry's being an end, or even a back if worst came to worst. But Denny was a great punt at Holy Cross. Dennis' brother Henry was a first grade center at Harvard. You can't question statistics like these, so a center's knocks will be Barry's.

MAJOR WEIGHS 195

To get back to Everett High and it's ambition to Barry. The lad has a scrapbook with contributions from many a famed coach. The second chapter is that book will be the tale of Everett's march to the title, if Everett boys have their way. To send the book away to a flying start in Barry's first football season. There's your mascot angle on Barry.

The Major is next. He's a 195-pound St. Bernard who invited himself to Everett's football opening session, back in August. The day was hot and The Major, a forlorn figure when he arrived at the Stadium His tongue was hanging as he panted heavily and his sore feet were could carry a ton. Sizeable weight.

But he snapped into the spirit of things when he saw the boys and tried to romp. Too tired to continue, he gratefully accepted a drink of water and fell asleep. He had officially adopted Everett High.

A few days later his owner, Al Crossley of bike riding fame appeared. The high spirits of the squad faded at prospects of losing The Major. Then it turned out that The Major's master and Trainer Jack Comerford of Everett were old friends. Joy reigned again as Crossley promised to allow The Major to stay with the squad for the balance of the season.

So both mascots, Barry the kingpin and inspirational point of the squad, and The Major, rough and tumble playmate of the football tiders are set for a great season.

"Gah-goo-and glug" stated Barry this a. m. ("I want a bottle," in English.)

"Gruff-huff-huff" rumbled The Major. ("Watch this team go," to you and you.)

And with these official statements the pair had opened another day of campaigning for Coach Denny and his charges.

Mail Clerk Wins First Prize in American Hole-in-One Contest

By Sully Kozol

It's all over!

And Dennis Sullivan, mail clerk of 12 Draken street, Dorchester, is the winner of the first grand prize in the third annual Boston American Hole-in-One contest just completed at Franklin Park.

During the 12 days in which over 5000 entrants have stepped up to the tee, no one has been able to make a hole in one.

Sullivan's drive, which netted a mere 135 inches from the coveted cup, entitles him to top honors in the tournament.

He will receive a complete set of golf clubs, three matched woods and nine irons, together with a golf bag.

Lawrence Seff, advertising man of 63 Bickford street, Jamaica Plain, whose drive landed 1 foot 7 inches from the cup, receives the second prize, which consists of a golf bag and three matched woods and seven irons.

Third prize a valuable sports wrist watch goes to E. F. Denehy of 26 Cedrus avenue, Roslindale.

Judge William H. McDonald, associate justice of the Charlestown municipal court, gets three matched wood clubs as fourth prize, and Sam Veiardi, the fifth prize winner, will receive five irons.

Best prize for the ladies goes to Mrs. J. Smith of Winthrop, who of the fair sex with a drive that came within 4 ft. 9½ inches from the cup. Mrs. H. Kirk of 9 Edge Hill road, Mattapan, was second in the ladies' class and Ethel Suverman of Crawford street, Roxbury, third. All will receive prizes.

Team prize honors go to the Burlington avenue mail clerks. The government letter men had three of their number who drove the agates within the charmed circle to top all other team groups.

Sullivan achieved his excellent mark on the second day of the contest. Dennie had worked all night at the Burlington avenue postoffice and had come out to the Franklin Park links with his working mate, Jack Donegan, to play some golf.

Before they stepped up to the specially constructed Boston American Hole-in-One tee they had gone around 22 holes of the ancient Scotch pastime.

Sullivan smacked the pellet just 13 inches away from the mark. Then, just to show that it was no side stroke of luck, he landed the next one 2 feet 3 inches from the hole on his second attempt.

Each prize winner will receive personal notification through the mail from the Hole-In-One editor as to the exact time that the awards will be made.

Watch for them!

Light-Heavy Title Without Owner

Toronto, Sept. 19. (AP).—The light heavyweight throne will prove to go a-begging for an official part awhile as far as the Canadian boxing Association is concerned.

The association which deprived Maxey Rosenbaum of title recognition on Monday because of his clowning tactics and his refusing of opponents in the ring, announced yesterday it would not recognize as champion the winner of a forthcoming match at Asbestos, N. C., between Joe Knight of Cairo, Ga., and Tony Shucco of Boston.

Star Returns After Absence of 20 Years

By Associated Press

San Francisco, Sept. 19.—The Chronicle says Patrick John O'Dea, Middlewest football sensation of the late 1890s, has turned up in San Francisco to smile at recent suggestions he may have been killed in the World War.

The Patrick O'Dea, who for four years on the University of Wisconsin team established himself as one of the greatest kickers of football is very much alive, the paper said.

Since he vanished almost 20 years ago the paper added O'Dea has been living under the name of Charles J. Mitchell and as such is now secretary-manager of the Westwood, Cal. Auto Club and Chamber of Commerce. Westwood is a logging town in Northern California.

O'Dea was quoted as declaring that he decided to disappear from San Francisco, where he had been practicing law, and assume the name of Mitchell because he found his football fame a handicap in the ordinary business of life.

REDSKINS POINT FOR BROOKLYN

With a couple of stiff exhibition games facing them within a period of four days, one with the Manchester Pros at the New Hampshire city on Sunday afternoon, the other against the Massachusetts All-Stars at Pearl Street Stadium on Wednesday next, the Redskins are wasting no time at their Wayland training camp.

Coach Dietz has lined up this pair of engagements as stiff workouts for the all-important game with Benny Friedman's Brooklyn Dodgers at Ebbets Field one week from Sunday.

He intends to give Phil Sorboe, brilliant little quarterback from Washington State a chance to display his wares in the exhibition games.

Two newcomers were given first consideration at this morning's workout at Wayland. One is Frank Bausch, powerful Kansan who took over the veteran Orlen Crow's position at center against the Pirates.

EAST AND WEST REALLY MEAN BUSINESS

By Lewis Burton
Universal Service

Westbury, N. Y., Sept. 19. Evidence sustaining the theory that the East-West polo scrimmage is not a figment of someone's imagination, nor a delusion, is due for presentation this afternoon.

It has been due on other afternoons as well, but this time, so they say, it will go through with water-wings if necessary on international field.

After five postponements, the opening match of the series is set for today, and weather predictions confirm a belief there will be no further delay.

The West, continues favorite, with its 36-goal team of Eric L. Pedley, Emer J. Boeseke, Jr., Cecil Smith and Adan Roark, riding in that order.

The lineups of the two teams, in fact, have remained unaltered through the four sieges of rain Michael G. Phipps, James P. Mills, Winston F. C. Guest and William Post, 2nd, a 30-goal group, will go forth for the East.

A. L. LEADERS OUTPLAYING GIANTS IN FLAG DRIVE

By Joe Cashman

On present form the Detroit Tigers deserve to be rated strong favorites over the New York Giants in the World Series starting two weeks from today.

The American League leaders have won their last six games and have just breezed through two wins against the Yankees without allowing the second strongest club in the loop a solitary tally in 18 innings.

In striking contrast, Bill Terry's world champions have dropped five of their last seven contests.

They were whitewashed in a 12-inning battle while losing three out of four to the St Louis Cardinals, and were blanked for 10 frames by the very ordinary Benny Frey as the last-place Reds were gaining an even break at the Polo Grounds yesterday.

If the race had three weeks instead of 12 days to go, the second-place Cards would be an even money bet to win out. There's no question but that the current visitors at the Wigwam snaps up as the most formidable outfit in the senior circuit at this writing.

AT TEPEE TODAY

The time limit figures to permit the Giants to stagger across the finish line in front, but they must do a lot better than that to retain their world's title.

They can't enter the money clashes weary of limb and jittery of nerve and hope to hold their own with the Bengals, who are already relaxing and will be at their physical and mental peak when the bell rings.

And that's exactly the sad plight in which the New Yorkers will find themselves unless they show a complete reversal of form and make mathematically certain of the flag in the next week.

Our Braves may lighten the Terry burden during the three-game series with the Cards, opening with a doubleheader this p.m., but they're just as likely to add to Memphis Bill's misery when the pace-setters come here for four games in three days, starting Friday.

HAFEY DOES IT

The Warriors and Cards were to begin hostilities yesterday, but early morning showers caused a postponement because of wet grounds. The sun came out in the afternoon, hours too late.

Both clubs were more than satisfied with the way fate dealt with them while they were loafing.

The Mound City crew had feared the Giants would take a doubleheader from the Reds and increase their lead to 4½ games. They were delighted to hear that their old playmate, 'Chick' Hafey, had hit a home run in the 10th to give the collarless a 2 to 0 win in the opener.

Our fourth place heroes couldn't have been happier over the Dodgers' feat of walloping the Pirates, which knocked the Pittsburgh entry 1½ games back of the first division.

If the Warriors do beat out the Bucs for the lowest money berth, the least they should do is to send vote of thanks to the Stengel Stooges of Flatbush.

The natives have made their best showing of the year against the "Daffiness Boys," winning 13 out of 20 starts, and the same Brooklyn "cousins" have taken 13 out of 19 from the Pirates.

If the rival managers stick to their guns before plans there'll be plenty of southpaw pitching on display at the Tepee this afternoon.

Mr. Boston Says:—

"Irisher" as Referee
Art Winch's Squawk
Another Joe Jacobs

By Jack Conway

ART WINCH, Boston [illegible] manager, must receive [illegible] from Joe Jacobs, manager Max Schmeling.

"McLarnin had an Irisher as referee," he declared. "No wonder we lost."

Managers always [illegible] WE when [illegible] talk about [illegible] good fighter [illegible] the ring visible. They use [illegible] words as "bum," "tramp," "palooka" or, dare we say it, "bum," among [illegible] lesser gift.

When was [illegible] fighting in Yankee [illegible] Donovan, who as referee [illegible] the decision [illegible] song that gained McLarnin a [illegible] boy over Ross [illegible] Winch is a young man, and probably was disappointed when Ross lost the welterweight championship.

Mr. Boston

Winch did not make a [illegible] on Judge Charley [illegible] though the latter is an [illegible] an "Irisher" as Donovan. It happened to vote for Ross.

Winch did not make [illegible] attacks on Tom O'Rourke [illegible] Ross won the title from [illegible] I find that the amateur manager of a fighter is a much [illegible] winner than he is a loser.

Donovan Honest Official

ARTHUR DONOVAN was [illegible] third man in the ring [illegible] Jack Sharkey fought a draw [illegible] Mickey Walker in Bronx [illegible] van voted for Walker [illegible] pens to come of Irish stock [illegible] key traces his ancestry back to Lithuania.

Yet when Sharkey defended [illegible] title as world's heavyweight champion against Primo Carnera [illegible] asked the New York Athletic Commission to name Donovan as referee.

"Donovan is honest and capable," Sharkey told the commission. "I thought he was in error when he voted for Walker, but I know he calls them as he sees them. That's all I ask from any referee."

Donovan was the choice of the commission and it was after his task to count Sharkey out.

I WAS AT the ringside in the New York Garden as Jimmy McLarnin entered the ring to battle Billy Petrolle. The "smart" money was trying to get an edge so that it could back Petrolle, who was on the short end of the betting.

Donovan entered the ring as the last minute selection of the commission.

"It all off," said a big Broadway gambler. "There will not be any larceny in there tonight. That guy is honest."

Donovan for years has been connected with the New York A. C. He probably has made his share of mistakes, but he doesn't take orders from any crooked ring of gamblers. He has always kept his self respect.

"We Were Robbed"

WINCH'S statement that McLarnin had an "Irisher" as a referee will stand with Joe Jacobs' famous squawk, "We were robbed," which he delivered over the radio after Sharkey had licked Schmeling in their second bout. Jacobs didn't set up any cry of "robbery" after Schmeling won the title on the floor coming [illegible] first contest with Sharkey.

The modern type of fight manager is quick to cry "robbery" when the decision does not go his own. I always contrast these squawkers with the late Joe Gans, the old school of managers.

Flynn managed Dave Shade in the latter's Boston bouts. The first Shade-Shevlin tussle at the Arena was a thrilling engagement. The milling was close, and the decision went to Shevlin.

"Shade was robbed, Leo," shouted the fan.

"Yeah!" replied Flynn without hesitating an eye. "Anyhow the boys will fight again and draw a bigger house than we had tonight."

Shevlin and Shade later sold out Mechanics Building. The show drew $22,000 and Shade received the decision.

"It is difference of opinion that makes the fight game," Flynn once told me.

McLarnin Is Slipping

EVEN IN victory McLarnin showed he is slipping. I thought Jimmy edged Petrolle in their first bout, but in that tussle his work wasn't impressive. The second contest was very close.

McLarnin stood off and boxed while Petrolle did the punching. It is the old story of advancing years. McLarnin also has wealth and is cautious.

ELF LOCK made up a world of ground to finish third behind Gold Signet and Wacoche last out. The Wacoche mare was beaten only a neck and one-half for all the money in that affair. Tomorrow she will be meeting nothing quite as formidable as those that trimmed her in that outing and will be racing at a distance that should suit her nicely. JESTING was accorded considerable support the other day but flattened out badly after getting a blistering pace. Under the feather impost of 95 pounds he will be dropping 15 pounds and figures to offer the most consistent opposition. SLIPPER KING was apparently a dead short horse the day he finished third behind Felicia and War Banner.

SEVENTH RACE
Koterito, Plummage, Grand Acre

KOTERITO, one that I named as my best bet last out, ran into a hot box in the stage of [illegible] improved position and finished gamely at the money. In this affair the Barrel co-observer will not be meeting anything quite as formidable as those that finished in front of him and may redeem himself. PLUMAGE, a superior muddler, would prove the more troublesome of the various contenders in the event the going [illegible] mudd[illegible] or slow. GRAND ACRE has received several tr[illegible] in sprints and should be ready for a first rate effort.

EIGHTH RACE

HASTY PETER has only to run back to his last race in order to hand a thin lot. The Peter Hasnes colt ran a winning race in this effort, but was forced to finish second to Laurettanash. But for having to shake off repeated challenges from several contenders throughout, he would have won that race. RACE EXPERT FEELS CHARLES ADAMS CAN SAVE YACHT CUP

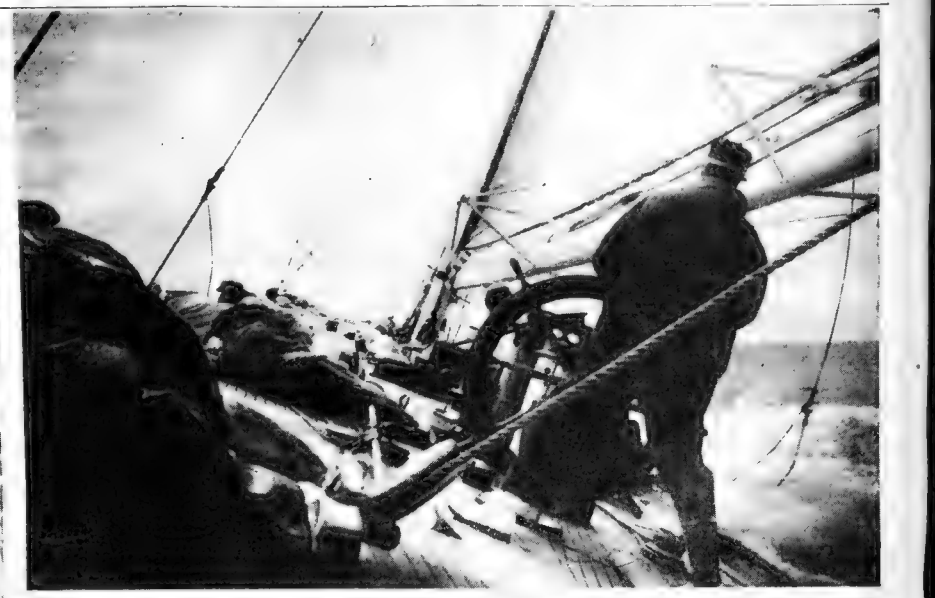
Skipper Harold Vanderbilt, at wheel of Rainbow, keeps his eyes resolutely ahead soon after the start of the Tuesday America's Cup series race off Newport. Maybe he's trying to miss seeing Tom Sopwith's Endeavour, shown in background, as it increases its speed and starts to make up distance on Rainbow, despite being to leeward. (Pictures by International News Photograph Service.)



"I'm always chasing rainbows" went the old popular song. Experts figured it would be Tom Sopwith's theme song when he pitted Endeavour against Rainbow. But Sopwith made the Rainbow do the chasing Monday and yesterday, and now the Briton is a 2 to 1 choice to pilot the first challenger to lift the silver mug in its close to a century of existence. Here Harold Vanderbilt guides his Rainbow, U. S. hope in the series, in yesterday's race, won by the Endeavour. The British sloop has won two straight races and is a 2-1 favorite to take the cup.

SPECULATE ON LOREE RAIL PURCHASE

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

State Street loves to speculate on the reasons behind moves made by financial and industrial leaders. Right now it is wondering out loud as to the status of the New York Central purchase by L. F. Loree. In the middle of the 1920's the owners of Delaware & Hudson common bought a majority of the shares of Central. Over the following few months [illegible] was heaped on the shoulders of Loree for what the carrier at one time Now however so are saying that L. F. L[illegible] owned without the Nickel investment must be Nickel different light. Some think that as far as to say a majority of Central is worth [illegible] something to worry about.

L. F. Loree

The constant traveler through the financial district finds it not at all difficult to lend his attention to some one who wants to cry the blues. It all begins and ends with the policies proposed or in force by Washington. To begin with, the low state of the brokerage business is in itself a major contributor to this feeling. That there are many faults with the new order cannot be denied for the next two years here can be no change in leadership. Mention this and the weeping and wailing becomes earnest. Our point is that the market is aware of all these things. It has been steadily buffeted by bad news. Yet it has not broken into a pronounced bear trend. Let's wait for it before joining the chorus of misery.

Notes: Our prediction [illegible] in itself [illegible] sidelines for the present and cross bridges when we come to them . . . And despite [illegible] bear market trend, bargains have been hoisted . . . As for the outlook for inflation, we stated here some time ago that around the first of 1935 it would be time enough to worry about it. For the present, it seems definitely in the cards. That administration another dose of inflation will be plain admission that the New Deal is a failure without repeated injections of artificial stimulants

The great hope of the markets and business is that the administration will see the necessity of turning to the right. The real need of reassuring private enterprise, which must, in the long run, carry the burden. At the moment the ever-increasing demands on federal largesse for various relief enterprises are taking their toll. And it is to be expected that development will be a strong influence in attracting administration leaders to the formulation of confidence-making policies.

Canadian securities are coming in for increasing attention because of their touted superiority to domestic investments in regard to safety of principal. [illegible] The Street found something ironic in Chairman Kennedy's complaint about the dullness of trading.

Brokers have been weeping on each other's shoulders about this [illegible] months. And they had something to cry about, too, for it has been exciting them mostly since they agreed all the boys ought to get together and do something about waking things up.

[illegible] The continuance of a heavily unbalanced federal budget, combined with the unconvertibility of our money, is probably the major factor in increasing business uncertainty. New York, Sept. 19—Curb exchange issues showed a firmer tendency today in all of the principal departments, but trading remained slow.

Gold mining stocks appeared to lead the upward turn. Hollinger Gold and Lake Shore mines advanced more than a point each, and Pioneer Gold, Wright Hargreaves and Teck Hughes improved fractionally. Newmont Mining also gained a little.

Commonwealth Edison and Sherwin Williams were other strong spots, scoring gains of better than a point. Pepperell and Dow Chemical showed a pot, while Swift & Co. Swift International, International Petroleum and Distillers Corporation-Seagrams, American Gas & Electric and American Cyanamid B pushed ahead.

Pa-American Airways and Safeway Stores, Inc., Hosiery & Lighting yielded one or more points. Bond issues of Niagara Hudson Power and Curtis Service were unable to rise.

'New Dealers' See Mistake in Price Boosting

By International News Service

New York, Sept. 19—The President and a majority of his Washington professors are now of the opinion that it was all a mistake to boost and peg prices. This is the dope from Washington.

All of which goes to prove the "brain trusters" while long on theory are short on history. This writer was just one of many voices that pointed out at the time the new deal was laying its recovery emphasis on high prices that the soundest and happiest prosperities were in low-priced eras.

This mistake—admitted only in private conversations—applies only to manufactured articles. Nothing is said about farm prices or other commodities, so just what [illegible] means is a little hazy.

There may be great significance in the admission for at the same time [illegible] professors are also admitting wage boosts early in the game were a mistake. Labor bosses [illegible] agree with that although it may be in accord on the matter of high prices.

Prices of manufactured articles are determined chiefly upon the cost of [illegible] produced—by the cost of labor and the raw materials i. e. farm products and other commodities—and commodity prices are high and labor costs are up the manufacturer also must charge a high price for his finished products.

Manufacturers are not in business just for love. They are working for a profit, just the same as the laborer and the raw material producer are.

The question can the high price idea be abandoned at this stage of the game without a complete reorganization of the whole New Deal program.

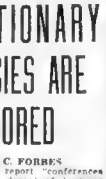
Labor is now actively campaigning for a 30-hour week without any change in the weekly pay return. There has been a Wall Street report circulating for several days that the President put this idea up to some of the leading industrialists who recently called upon him. Such a move would increase manufacturing costs greatly.

How material production was reduced by [illegible] about lower prices. They also will have reduced [illegible] devaluation and the silver purchase scheme—both of which are inflationary. These cannot be erased, so the problem is not [illegible] simple as it seems. The cost of living is bound to be higher this winter, thanks to the New Deal plus the drought. Business has fallen back to where it was two years ago when the New Deal was chosen to lead us. Unemployment is about as great as it ever has been, and the cost of relief is going to be higher.

REACTIONARY POLICIES ARE SCORED

By B. C. FORBES

Newspapers report conferences behind closed doors of business men who, it is reported, have considered and presumably endorsed certain plans and policies. If newspaper accounts are accurate, some of the things demanded are insanely reactionary.



B. C. Forbes

This writer was among the first to question the soundness of some of the policies of professors and also advocating wage boosts early in the game were a mistake. Labor bosses [illegible] agree with that although it may be in accord on the matter of high prices.

SHARES HIGHER IN BRISK RALLY

Yesterday's sales 335,000
Week ago 401,430
Year ago 2,820,820

New York, Sept. 19—Gains of 1 to 4 points were scored today as the stock market staged the best rally in two weeks.

Rails and chemicals were the early pacemakers, but they were passed by the metals later as U. S. Smelting ran up nearly 4 points in short order. Farm shares also displayed a strong tone and the whole list improved.

CHEMICALS HIGHER

Bonds also continued to forge ahead with both government and speculative issues scoring good gains. The dollar was firm. Commodities were sluggish, with grains and cotton working lower.

Rails were helped by better traffic figures for last week.

Sharp covering was prominent in the chemicals. Allied Chemicals, a recent weak spot, snapped back around 3 points. DuPont also was strong.

Tobaccos were higher though Reynolds B showed minor pressure. Utilities displayed a better tone. American Telephone rose a point.

Chrysler and General Motors were strong. Liquors and rubbers were better in sympathy with the trend in the rest of the market.

U. S. Steel ran up around a point, crossing the 35-level, while the preferred did as well.

AUTUMN BUSINESS

Mid-week business statistics provided little in the way of clues to autumn business recovery. Electric power production for the week ended Sept. 15 showed a gain of 1.4% over the preceding week, but little more than 3 per cent over the Labor Day week, and was 18 per cent under the like week of last year. A normal seasonal rise in power output for the second week of September should have been a little more than 6 per cent over the holiday week.

Steel production usually does not change much in September, but in view of the extremely low level of operations reached at the end of August, a brisker pickup than has occurred had been hoped for, particularly since it appeared that production had been cut well under consumption for a considerable period.

"Iron Age" today placed the past week's ingot output at 19 per cent of capacity, up 1½ percentage points, but said that such buying as had appeared reflected the growth of replacement purchases rather than the initiation of a broad fall upturn." The cautious are buyers, it added, "that orders for truckloads are being placed where orders for cars would ordinarily be expected."

The steady growth of commercial bank loans since the middle of July, the first such expansion since the inception of the depression, is attracting much attention, although the gain for reporting member banks amounted to only $14,000,000 in the latest week. The new attitude of the comptroller of the currency on bank loans, as expressed yesterday, may expedite this expansion of credit. The comptroller said that merely because a loan was slow was no conclusive sign that it was not sound.

DAUGHTERS OF VENUS -:- By Robert Terry Shannon

Madame Hubert Finds Her Beauty Establishment in Danger; Seeks Way Out

SYNOPSIS

In the dining room of a Los Angeles hotel, Juliet Rankin is approached by Denton Terhune, well known San Francisco lawyer. Attracted by Juliet's beauty and gladness, he asks if he might chat with her. During their conversation, Terhune tells Juliet that she is searching for something more than love and marriage. "A breathless something you cannot name." Terhune introduces Mary to Madame Hubert, wealthy beauty expert, whom he describes as the oddest and most interesting woman in Los Angeles, and her handsome, young assistant, Thomas O'Hara.

CHAPTER II

Juliet realized that in a minute or two more she would see the last of this comradely middle-aged man who had drifted so informally into this her first evening out here.

She had always heard the West was friendlier and franker than the East. It was true.

Denton Terhune—obviously a man of character—had revealed himself so naturally to her that he seemed like an old friend—in less than an hour.

Yet Juliet herself had told him scarcely more than her name.

He had taken her at face value as a worthwhile person and had done a little philosophical guessing about her future. No attempt to date her up. It wouldn't be difficult, Juliet decided, to get along in a town like this. But the local amiability that Juliet sensed certainly was not operating at Madame Hubert's table.

O'Hara had reased growling and had barricaded himself behind a stony silence while the bent little woman kept up a low and mournful croaking.

INVITING CALAMITY

"I'll absolutely not have Mrs. Gottlieb removed to the hospital!" she was insisting for the hundredth time. Her voice was corroded with the rust of a French accent, a relic of her legendary youth in Paris. "If she dies on our hands—we must risk that. You're a fool, O'Hara. Suppose we go now to her husband with a confession—what then? We stir up alarm, excitement. He prepares a damage suit. It's inviting calamity. Perhaps—immediately!—we are arrested!"

O'Hara grunted. "Oh, Mrs. Gottlieb'll die, all right. Probably kicking off tonight while we sit here."

Madame Hubert's brisk black eyes fixed themselves upon a short rotund man whose face consisted principally of a virile but wandering nose. His name was Herman Gottlieb and he was, at the moment, laboriously foxtrotting his stenographer, a curving brunette with a painted rosebud mouth.

"Look at him!" rasped Madame Hubert. "Men! His poor wife trying to make herself beautiful to hold a husband like him!" Her eyes snapped back to O'Hara as though she blamed him for the whole thing. "Why didn't someone find out her heart was weak before Von Guerdon gave her ether?" Madame Hubert consumed a spoonful of sherbet. "Oh, well, maybe she'll recover after all."

"GOING TO DIE"

"Don't kid yourself," sulked O'Hara. She's going to die and when she does it's goodby to reputation and business. Customers will dodge the Institute like it was a pest house. Malpractice! Manslaughter! I can see the headlines. For the last time, I tell you I'm going to spring the bad news on Gottlieb and make him take his wife home before she dies. We can threaten to expose him as a philanderer unless he gives us a break. But we've got to burp it."

There was a trace of bluster in O'Hara's words but Madame Hubert's pointed chin stubbornly closed above her over-hanging neck giving her the expression of a determined witch.

"No, no, no!" It was as though a crow had cawed thrice.

Before O'Hara could reply, which he had no intention of doing, they were aware of Denton Terhune, accompanied by Juliet, standing over them.

Five minutes later Terhune had gone, but Juliet remained and was seated between Madame Hubert, who welcomed her presence, and the general manager, who distinctly did not.

The Madame, her eyes flashing, had discovered a professional joy in the face and perfect figure of Juliet. The withered creature was an artist, an appreciator of subtle and interesting beauty. Juliet, in an instant, fulfilled her exacting standards as did no other woman who ever had come before those hard and shrewd little eyes.

It would be honest to say, were such a thing possible this Madame Hubert's heart warmed and expanded at the sight of Juliet's harmonic symmetry.

OFFERS JULIET JOB

One of her hands, brown as a claw, slipped across the table and rested lightly on the back of Juliet's wrist.

"My dear," said Madame Hubert, "I can find a use for you. How would you like to work with me?"

Juliet smiled. "I never wanted particularly to be a manicurist."

"I don't mean anything like that," returned Madame Hubert seriously. "I can use you in lots of ways—important ways. Is it not so, O'Hara?"

A sullen glow burned in O'Hara's eyes. For no reason that Juliet could discern, the man seemed to dislike her instantly and intensely.

"I'm fed up," O'Hara said impatiently. "We've got enough trouble on hand without any more complications. I don't want or need Miss Rankin in our organization and I am not going to hire her! I'm sorry—nothing personal—but that's the way I feel."

Juliet started to laugh but suddenly a stinging heat got into her cheeks. Something in O'Hara's personality's of knocking at the back of her mind, worrying her. Somewhere in the depth of her being a memorable and decisive mecanism clicked into place.

"I'm sorry Mr. O'Hara feels that way about me," she said, turning her head completely away from him—ignoring him—and smiling sweetly at Madame Hubert, "I'll be awfully glad to join your organization, Madame!"

O'Hara pushed back his chair and got to his feet rudely. It was to be a battle between the Madame and O'Hara. He was hard-boiled. She was harder. Juliet noticed a wart on the woman's face, a brownish and mottled countenance, dry like an autumn leaf. The old black eyes glistened but there was never the ghost in them of compromise or surrender.

"DON'T BE A FOOL!"

"Don't be a fool, O'Hara," said Madame Hubert icily. "You'll regret it."

There was the pallor of anger under O'Hara's fine clear skin. He did not deign to look at Juliet.

"We're in a spot and I can't get things straightened up if I am to be interfered with," he said in a suppressed voice. "After all the hard work I've done to build up the business you're asking me to stand by and see it go smash like a toy balloon because of your stupidity."

He was about to leave abruptly when Madame Hubert's hand touched his sleeve and skittered up it like a tiny dun-colored squirrel.

"Bebe Monsieur Bebe!" crooned Madame Hubert with a new note of wheedle. "If he can't have his own little way, he won't play, eh? He will abandon the poor old woman to her fate—to say nothing of his impoliteness to the young lady."

"These temperamental people!" she exclaimed to Juliet. O'Hara's only half business man—the other half is pure artiste."

Juliet smiled subtly. "I understand perfectly. A man in the beauty business—naturally!"

For O'Hara it was a drop of acid on the raw and his face darkened. "Oh, he's a nice enough animal!" said Madame Hubert complacently, now that O'Hara was again seated. "I'd be lost without him. Handling the beauty work—the women—is not in his department. From a business standpoint we're an industrial concern just like a factory where they make shoes or automobiles or straw hats. But I'm the stupid one—as he says—tonight. I who conceived the whole institute! Do you wonder I called him an animal?"

O'HARA IGNORED

"Is he?" asked Juliet in amazement and amusement.

"Observe for yourself!" cried Madame Hubert. "This is a moment historic, yet he seizes the opportunity to stir a quarrel."

"Well, it's historic all right," growled O'Hara. "Wait till Mrs. Gottlieb dies. The grand coliseum of the famous Madame Hubert! Next week it will be the notorious Madame Hubert!"

The Madame affected not to hear him and addressed herself directly to Juliet.

"The occasion is historic because you and I have met here at this little table, my dear. You—the most beautiful woman in Los Angeles and I—the most ugly. It is superb—it is dramatic—it is sheer collision! Think what Balzac would have made of it—yet this man here, this O'Hara with the soul of a tenth-rate pawnbroker, sits and screams about fifty dollars and dimes! He is revolting—faugh, faugh!"

"Only a malicious and wicked woman would say, faugh, faugh, like you do!" he declared openly. "You know you're a sinful old miser and all this talk about drama and moments historic is the worst kind of bunk! If the headwaiter didn't watch you'd carry off spoons."

CHILDISH MADNESS

"Regard nothing he says as serious. For years he represented an American company in China until the typhus got him. He cannot go back because a second attack is fatal. The fever—you know—" and she tapped her temple significantly with a skinny finger and rolled her eyes.

What, in heaven's name, Juliet wondered, kind of people were these? Everything about them was touched with a childish madness.

It was fantastic that between them somehow they had built up a great business. Yet there was no question as to that fact. Denton Terhune had vouched for it and Madame Hubert's diamond dog-collar alone was worth a fortune.

Juliet, in any enterprise mastered by these two, Juliet decided, would unquestionably be a continuous combat. And association with O'Hara was bound to be disagreeable. Juliet could see that already. It occurred to her that possibly he resented her because—this was only a guess—he was swindling Madame Hubert. O'Hara drank a glass of water and looked Juliet straight in the eye.

"Take my advice and keep out of it," he said decisively. "I don't like you and you don't like me—we would never get on together. You would only be in the way and then is no future with us, anyhow."

Vote Tomorrow and Nominate James M. Curley for Governor

GET out tomorrow—and vote! It is the unfortunate habit of many men and women to neglect the voting franchise in a primary contest.

Any such neglect tomorrow conceivably might deprive the Commonwealth of the real leadership it sorely needs.

If registered Democrats get out and vote, the nomination of James M. Curley for governor is a foregone conclusion—his election in November assured.

The only danger lies in the fact that the electorate may be delinquent and neglect the polls, believing Mr. Curley's qualifications place him so far ahead of the field that their votes are not needed.

Similar delusions in other political contests have displaced the best man to the undying regret of those who knew he SHOULD and COULD win, and believed he would win regardless of their failure to vote.

The state's problems are such in this period of convalescence from the serious illness of depression that the public must guard against any possibility—NO MATTER HOW REMOTE—of Mr. Curley's defeat.

His executive ability, of just the type now demanded to meet the problems of state, has been proved in the fire of three terms as Mayor of Boston. No other can match that experience.

He has the VISION that gives birth to constructive action, the SUPERVISION that makes for real accomplishment once a project is undertaken. He doesn't sit back and wait for "George" to do it.

The problems of the people have always been the problems of Mr. Curley, in whatever office he has held. In the solution of them he has maintained a zealous guard against secret exploitation of the public by selfish private interests.

Mr. Curley is a BUILDER. He may be depended upon to build the future of the state on a firm foundation.

Mr. Curley is a compassionate man. A sympathetic understanding of tragic needs is required of present day leadership.

Massachusetts NEEDS him in the governor's chair—DEMANDS him in the governor's chair.

Voting for him is the only way to put him there.

Aid his election and the state's future by voting for him tomorrow.

New Study of Traffic Conditions Needed

TRAFFIC conditions in downtown Boston plainly call for a more serious study than has yet been made.

Something ought to be done—and done without delay—to remedy conditions BEFORE, NOT AFTER, they get even worse.

A gentleman calls our attention to the fact that he recently sought to take a taxicab to the Back Bay from downtown during so-called rush hours.

The taxi driver said:

"As much as I need the money, I'd advise you to take the subway. There's little chance of my getting you through in anything like the same time."

Traffic conditions are certainly in tough shape when a taxi driver refuses fares!

Substantiation of the taxi driver's conception of difficulties is seen in another incident.

Again in the rush hours. Two passengers boarded a taxi in Winthrop Square for the South Station.

They were more than a half-hour making the trip, which ought, at the most, to take under five minutes.

ONE can picture a serious conflagration getting under way one of these days, during a typical tieup, with the fire engines being unable to get through UNLESS SOMETHING IS DONE.

What is to be done? Make the study suggested—a thorough, serious study.

Find out what part parking plays in creating delays.

Find out if our multitudinous ONE-WAY streets are in need of change.

Find out if it would be better to turn certain traffic lights into "blinkers" at times of stress to let the traffic streams flow more freely; or time them differently.

Find out if we need more traffic officers stationed at vantage points—they do a mighty fine job in Dewey square around the South Station.

In any event, let's do SOMETHING besides sit back and think about it until we have serious reason to be sorry this obvious public duty was ignored.

A Faithful Friend

Patrick E. Geary is 72, but you would not think so if you happened to meet him strolling on Beacon Hill with his little dog. The man is too active to be that old, you would say.

And he is active. The other day he went to the roof of his five-story home to see whether the laundry was dry. His dog went with him as he always does. Geary stepped over a temporary fence that repair men had left. He tripped and fell 12 feet to a fire escape.

He was knocked unconscious and seriously injured. That's quite a fall for a younger man! But he was alone on the roof; no one saw him fall; no one could call for help—no one but the little dog.

The dog barked until he attracted the attention of a neighbor, who called an ambulance.

It's an old tale—this story of the intelligence and courage of a dog. Yet there are persons who do not like dogs; persons who tell you they ought to be forbidden, at least in cities. To these we can only say: Own one for a while and change your mind.

To Keep a Convict

The escape of a convicted slayer from the Hampden County (or any other) jail is inexcusable, regardless of how it is "explained."

There seems to have been more truth than poetry uttered in the old lines:

"Stone walls do not a prison make,
Nor iron bars a cage."

It is timely irony to suggest that hereafter we try keeping convicted killers at the steering wheel of a sedan, turning them loose inside one of the "rotary traffic circles" devised by our ingenious State highway planners.

They'd be a longer time finding their way out!

It's the Old Story!

It's the old story, mates! Reminiscent of the hectic days of '29 in Wall and State Streets. The Securities and Exchange Commission is investigating a rayon stock.

A suit charges the defendants with attempting a $10,000,000 deal through manipulation, rigging, pegging and controlling of stock, says the International News Service.

The stock had more than doubled in quoted value before trading in it was suspended.

We can, at any rate, still lock the barn door after the horse has been stolen.

Educational Opening!

Columbia University, which furnished a large number of leading members of the Brain Trust, announces that it will have fifty courses this Autumn and Winter to explain to adult students the meaning of the New Deal.

We hope the Brain Trust will attend.

If Oppressive Taxation Keeps Up!

For years taxation has been growing worse and worse.

Increased Federal taxation can be explained. We are paying for the World War, with recovery taxes added.

Increased State taxation is also easily explained. Much of the taxes the State collects goes back to help along local government.

And it is a fact that in every State LOCAL TAXATION has shown THE LARGEST INCREASE WITH THE LEAST EXCUSE—except the excuses of politics and too much local government.

Consider these statistics: Since 1913 local taxation has increased 216.4 per cent in New York State, 297 per cent in New Jersey, 334 per cent in Connecticut, 161.4 per cent in Massachusetts, 209 per cent in Maryland, 150.6 per cent in California, 196 per cent in Georgia, 213.4 per cent in Illinois, 299.3 per cent in Michigan, 240.9 per cent in Nebraska, 216.6 per cent in Pennsylvania, 295.4 per cent in Texas, 267.4 per cent in Virginia, 135.6 per cent in Washington State and 261.5 per cent in Wisconsin.

EVERY STATE IN THE UNION must reduce its burdens of local government—abolish counties, consolidate municipalities and eliminate needless tax districts.

The local tax figures tell why.

Listen, World! -:- By Elsie Robinson

Do they want to have their cake and eat it, too?

I was looking for a stenographer to do a short extra job and, after we'd settled the business, I fell to talking with the man who ran the employment office.

Elsie Robinson

He was a lean, seasoned outfit—somewhere between 45 and 50—who'd been hiring and firing 'em for the last 20 years. I asked him how the youngsters of today—meaning anywhere from 19 to 25—stacked up as workers.

He lit his cigar, squinted along it for a while, asked me if I'd promise not to publish his name—then started in.

"Well, they're bright enough," he conceded. "I guess if I had to compare them with kids of our time I'd have to admit these were smarter. There's something about life today that wises a youngster up mighty fast. The average kid of 15 knows more of the answers than his own dad. They seem to be born knowing their way around. And, being that way, they get the hang of a job in no time at all.

"I remember how dumb I was at 17, when I got my first real job. Clumsy as a police dog pup. All paws, and couldn't seem to get an idea through that thick head of mine. Why, any one of these modern kids could make me look like a two-spot. Before you're half through telling them what to do, they're doing it. And doing it swell! But—"

He lingered a long time over that "but." When he spoke again he seemed to have been backtracked.

"You hear a lot of talk about how much easier it was to get and hold a job 30 years ago. And, in a way, it's true. There weren't near so many people. Competition wasn't so crowded or so fast. So everyone naturally draws the conclusion that youngsters didn't work so hard to make good.

"But the truth is we worked a lot harder! Maybe it was because a job meant more then than it does nowadays. It wasn't just something that you did to earn the makings for the next party. We didn't have many 'next parties'—or any other distractions.

"Your job then was just about the biggest thing in your life. A youngster was prepared to give it all he had. If he didn't—he didn't last long. So you didn't hear much kicking about overtime. And if a young fellow was handed a little extra responsibility he thought it was a compliment.

"But these kids today have an entirely different slant. They work because they have to. But they aren't tickled over it or proud of it—and it sure isn't their main interest.

"Their main interest, as near as I can figure it out, is Having a Good Time. Of course, most of them have got some idea of a Big Career—some day. But it never seems to have any connection with the job on hand. That's different. That's just something they've got to do until their Big Break comes along. And so they won't give their job a bit more than they have to.

"They're lazy just long enough to land themselves some kind of a paying proposition, and then just try to make them go on developing themselves!

"F'r instance, if it's a girl, she'll learn to be pretty fast on the machine and turn out a fair looking letter. After that, she expects to get by by interesting the boss, or using her job to meet useful people. And a boy figures about the same. If you ask them to forget the parties, and cut out the holidays, and dig in the way we used to do, they think you're crazy.

"The trouble is, they want to have their cake and eat it, too. They've been brought up soft. They've been used to a lot of fun and leisure, and they don't intend to let any job interfere with it.

"They're smart—there's no use denying that. They can do almost any job they set their minds to. BUT IF YOU'RE DEPENDING ON THEM FOR CONTINUOUS PERFORMANCE, YOU'RE JUST OUT OF LUCK."

That's the report on twentieth century workers by a man who knows them. And it comes just as several million of 'em are wailing that a Young Worker Never Gets a Chance.

So what? Who's right? What's YOUR answer?

A WOMAN'S LOT

I wonder what she's say
If I went to her today
With my finger nails a bright and flaming red;
With no leather on my toes,
With a thickly powdered nose
And an eyebrow like a bit of linen thread?

I wonder what she'd do
If, as bulkier I grew,
I refused to take the food she passed around
And gave voice to loud Hosannas
When a diet of bananas
In two weeks had cut my weight by half a pound?

I wonder what she'd say
If I sat for half a day
While some barber held me prisoner in his chair
And with gadgets made of wire
Made me suffer torments dire
Just to get a little wave into my hair?

Every man can unafraid
Face life's battle as he's made
For his fortune on his looks does not depend.
But a woman's lot it seems
Is to fuss with dopes and creams
And to fight with fats and wrinkles to the end.

Human Side of the News; Picture of Fight Fans

By Edwin C. Hill

One finds a heavy deposit, a deep vein of human nature at the ringside. As the pork and beaners killed time until the main event at the Ross-McLarnin fight, there was time to observe and meditate. It is pretty nearly the same old crowd. Fight fans have been the same from the beginning, and probably always will be.

Old Doc Freud would chase a lot of these lads with a butterfly net—meek, mild men being red-blooded and yelling for murder; exhibitionists getting a psychic kick out of being spotted up in the limelight with the celebrities, the simple Neanderthal truck driver vicariously cracking skulls; the big mob getting steamed up with that mysterious intoxication of crowds.

LIKES A WINNER

It will be a long time before the NRA changes all that. There is a kind of emotional nudism here, which the Romans, with their "panem et circenses" discovered was a wholesome thing, so it is perhaps just as well. It looks like the boy in the black trunks has the other lad groggy.

The crowd is with him—although it was against him at the start. Everyb dy likes to string with a winner. These fights stir up old memories.

There was Jack Sharkey, after he had won the championship. He went to Tait's restaurant in San Francisco and ordered a lobster. When it was served, a claw was missing. Sharkey asked the waiter about it.

"There were two of them shipped here in a crate," the waiter explained. "They got in a fight and one ripped the other's claw off."

"Take it back and bring me the winner," roared Sharkey.

Roosevelt looks and acts a winner, and the crowd likes him. So did T. R. and he was a fight fan "Bring me the winner." But here's a prize fight.

There's Mayor La Guardia. He's a red hot fight fan, as was Jimmy Walker. Jimmy was a better showman, though, arriving late, throwing back a crimson-lined overcoat, bowing to the crowd. There is the usual roster of celebrities, politicians, bankers, office-holders, actors, financiers.

Oddly enough, Al Smith never is seen at the ringside. He was brought up in Oliver street, where wallops grew like daisies in a meadow. But he never liked prize fights.

This is probably the only holdout in the political crowd. Almost a bar sinister, it seems for a New York statesman, for a matriculate in American politics must like prizefights, just as an Eton schoolboy must stumble over the "bridge of asses."

THE MANAGER WINS

Prize fight managers haven't changed any with the years. Here is a business which upsets a whole lot of this intelligence test business worked up by the professors.

There have been shrewd and go-getting fight managers who were all but illiterate and whose quantitative and qualitative Binet Simon reactions could have qualified them only as assistant morons.

Altogether, they make out a great case for laissez faire. They compete against each other, and that means some real competition. They are conditioned and built up to haunch, paunch and jowl fighting trim to a point where no one else can compete with them. This has been demonstrated time and again.

Many a time, shrewd, sharp business men, with suspense files and trade organizations and map and tack methods have declared themselves in on fighter management. They never have stayed long. And it wasn't just because of the larcenous trend of the business, as the gifted Bill McGeehan used to call it.

Somehow the rough-and-tumble old-time manager always came out with the jug-handled contract and the heavy percentage.

There was William Brady, who had a turn managing Jim Jeffries and Bob Fitzsimmons. He was soon back in the theatrical business. And Sam H. Harris, making a round trip in and out of the game with Terry McGovern. The most successful managers have been recruited from the unspoiled indigenous fan.

Up until a few years ago, one saw illustrious racketeers at the prize fights, sometimes on terms of intimacy with the police. The Legs Diamond mob, and Legs, himself, were fight enthusiasts. They made a great splash of color at the ringside, a bright chiaroscuro of horse blanket suits, ruby necktics and diamonds.

LOUD CLOTHES OUT

The ace-in-the-hole element here is quite a drab lot in comparison. They are dressed with taste and reserve. Some of them look like college boys. Viewing the fight with a friend who gets about more than I do, I asked him about this.

"The boys found it wasn't good business to splash around in loud clothes," he said. "As the rackets got organized on a business basis, this individual display of vanity became troublesome. Their business suffered from this blatant identification. They learned to dress and work quietly. That mild little chap over there in the blue serge suit could write his check for $10,000."

Shoved right up close to the ring is the theatrical crowd—as usual. The profession always seems to get the highest priced seats. Perhaps it is good business.

There is whispering and furtive pointing as stage stars are identified. One recalls that old Jack Sharkey is now dishing beer behind his bar in Boston. That was the ticket for fighters emeritus in those days—not so much now, although some of them run cafes—like Jack Johnson.

One wonders where this crowd will go after the fight. Remember the mobs that used to pile into Kid McCoy's Sheepshead cafe after a big fight? Or the Hotel Metropole—Jim Corbett's place—or Paddy Mullins' dump in the Bowery?

The fight business was nurtured and managed in and around saloons in those lusty brawling days. Will it be the same again, now that we have repeal? Possibly not. Those chromium-plated, co-educational bars don't seem to be quite in the spirit of the thing.

But, of course, there will be plenty of other shady hatcheries for all the deals, devices and strategems of the ancient combat du bete. That unchanged and intensely human fight crowd will guarantee that.

Another State Park

Massachusetts has acquired another State park.

It is the famed Nickerson estate in East Brewster on Cape Cod.

Consisting of more than 1500 acres of splendid wood and meadow land, four very large ponds and a spacious deer park, it is a gift to the State from Mrs. Roland G. Nickerson and her daughter, Helen Nickerson Sears. The property was developed by the late Roland Nickerson, one of the heads of the Sante Fe Railroad, and used as a summer estate.

Bisected by the main Cape-to-Boston highway and tapped by many roads, trails and paths, it will be one of the most accessible public tracts in the Commonwealth.

Samuel A. York, commissioner of the Department of Conservation, is making a study of the estate to determine how it may best be utilized. A suggestion has been made that cabins be built for vacationists.

A public that is grateful to the donors of this splendid site will now insist on only one thing: that the playground be utilized so that it will provide health and recreation for as many of our citizens as possible.
